QUARTERLY SUMMARY

JULY-SEPTEMBER, 1906.

PREPARED IN THE

BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS

WAR DEPARTMENT.

EXPLANATION OF REGULAR STATISTICAL TABLES.

Imports.—The regular statement of imports of merchandise, by articles and countries, in this publication is what is termed the statement of general imports, embracing imported articles entered for immediate consumption on arrival and articles entered for warehouse.

The values of articles imported are governed by the regulations in effect April 9, 1900, which prescribe that the values of imported merchandise subject to duty shall be “the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise as bought and sold in usual wholesale quantities at the time of exportation in the principal markets of the country from whence imported, and in the condition in which such merchandise is there bought for exportation or consigned for sale, including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks, and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition ready for shipment.”

Exports.—The regular statement of exports, by articles and countries, in this publication includes the exports of domestic products or manufactures, and exports of commodities of foreign origin which have been changed from the form in which they were imported or enhanced in value by further manufacture.

The value of exports of merchandise is their value at the time of exportation in the ports of the island whence they are exported.

Tonnage tables.—In the tables of tonnage movement, the tonnage is stated in net tons of 100 cubic feet carrying space after the prescribed allowances are made for crew space, engine space, etc.

Weights.—In all tables published the ton weight is 2,240 pounds and the hundred weight is 112 pounds, unless indicated otherwise.

Customs districts.—Statements of imports and exports are shown by customs districts which have a certain prescribed limit of territory with a port of entry.

OCTOBER-DECEMBER, 1906.

BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS

WAR DEPARTMENT.

EXPLANATION OF REGULAR STATISTICAL TABLES.

The values of articles imported are governed by the regulations in effect April 9, 1900, which prescribe that the values of imported merchandise subject to duty shall be “the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise as bought and sold in usual wholesale quantities at the time of exportation in the principal markets of the country from whence imported, and in the condition in which such merchandise is there bought for exportation or consigned for sale, including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks, and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition ready for shipment.”

Exports.—The regular statement of exports, by articles and countries, in this publication includes the exports of domestic products or manufactures, and exports of commodities of foreign origin which have been changed from the form in which they were imported or enhanced in value by further manufacture.

The value of exports of merchandise is their value at the time of exportation in the ports of the island whence they are exported.

Tonnage tables.—In the tables of tonnage movement, the tonnage is stated in net tons of 100 cubic feet carrying space after the prescribed allowances are made for crew space, engine space, etc.

Weights.—In all tables published the ton weight is 2,240 pounds and the hundred weight is 112 pounds, unless indicated otherwise.

Customs districts.—Statements of imports and exports are shown by customs districts which have a certain prescribed limit of territory with a port of entry.

PHILIPPINE COMMERCE IN THE CALENDAR YEAR 1906.

Commercial returns from the Philippines for the calendar year 1906 show an excess of exports over imports amounting to $6,239,124, a sum almost double that of the previous year. The excess of imports that characterized the trade for a number of years past has been reversed in 1905 and 1906, and the six million dollar credit in favor of the islands represents the culmination of a steady annual change dating back to 1901, when the excess of imports reached the maximum sum of $5,656,118.

This increased trade balance for the year is to be attributed to reduced imports, which are $3,646,782 less than in 1905. But the heavy reduction in total trade does not in itself imply unsatisfactory import conditions in 1906. As compared with import totals in 1905 about eighty-five per cent of the deficit is due to a falling off in the purchase of rice and opium, but no commercial significance is to be attached to the large decline in opium, while the bearing of greatly diminished purchases of foreign rice must be considered as highly favorable to the general import trade.

The decline in opium imports from $739,418 to $440,464 may be attributed to increased taxation and increased restrictions in the use of the drug as a result of the governmental policy looking toward ultimate suppression of the trade. Rice imports, that following in the wake of disordered industrial conditions and the loss of draft animals throughout the islands, reached the enormous sum of twelve and a half millions in value or more than a third of the total imports, have in 1906 by constant annual declines reached a value of but $3,991,913, the smallest sum in any calendar period since 1899. This statistical evidence of increasing local rice production, and of the diminishing weight of this foreign tax for the food necessity of the great mass of the people is the most hopeful feature of the year's figures.

Of other imports showing declines of considerable importance the most notable are to be found in the iron and steel schedules. This trade showed a large increase and an unprecedented total in 1905, reaching almost three million dollars in value. In consequence of the installment of the new Manila street railway the schedule of electrical machinery showed exceptionally large imports, and a similar abnormal trade appeared in steel rails and in structural iron and steel. Figures for 1906 show a reduction of $173,831 in the value of electrical machinery, of $134,427 in steel rails, and of $117,770 in structural materials.

Imports of illuminating oil increased steadily in value up to 1904 when they amounted to about three-quarters of a million dollars. Declines have marked this trade in the past two years, and the total of $448,219 in 1906 is $189,624 less than in 1905. The boot and shoe trade is less by $130,149 and, with a somewhat irregular annual showing, reaches the lowest figure since 1901. Even greater irregularity is found in jewelry imports, which with a shrinkage of $111,350 in 1906 reach a minimum value of $91,324. The silk trade with a value of $852,868 in 1901 has steadily declined in succeeding years, and a further reduction of more than a hundred thousand dollars is found in 1906, while a somewhat smaller reduction is to be noted in the case of cement, as well as of beer.

To offset these declines in the import trade a noteworthy gain of nearly three hundred thousand dollars is found in imports of cotton yarn and thread, which reach a maximum figure of one and a quarter million dollars, while the large item of cotton cloths, amounting to over four and a half million dollars in 1906, includes an increase of $76,350. The cattle trade also shows an increase of $172,729 in a total of $949,011 that is the maximum during American occupation. Wheat flour also reaches a maximum of $885,076 with an increase of more than a hundred thousand dollars over the figures of 1905, while a seventy-five thousand dollar increase is to be noted in lumber and smaller gains appear in imports of both condensed milk and potatoes.

The total export trade is smaller than in 1905 by $811,882, a decline chiefly attributable to greatly reduced hemp production in consequence of the disastrous typhoon that swept with exceptionally destructive force over the hemp districts in September, 1905. Reduced values are also to be noted in exports of sugar, though considerable increases in the tobacco trade and substantial improvement in the price of copra combine to very materially offset the losses in hemp and sugar and limit the net decline in exports to the figures above stated.

The quantity of hemp exported is the smallest since 1900, and amounting to 102,439 tons, is but four-fifths the showing in 1905. Reduced monthly shipments followed shortly after the typhoon and in the early part of 1906 reached a very low level, but since then there has been a recovery and a return to former figures is indicated in the closing months of the year. A substantial offset to the reduced quantity is found in the increased price per ton in 1906, an average of $191.45 being shown, which is the highest for any year under American occupation and more than twenty dollars above that of the two previous years. But even with this favorable condition of prices, the producers of this most important and profitable industry of the islands have suffered a loss of more than two million dollars as compared with the exports of the previous year.

The sugar trade, owing to exceptionally high prices in 1905, presents a showing in 1906 of an increased export production of twenty thousand tons with an actual reduction in value of over a half million dollars. Sugar exports, with increasing activity in the industry under the stimulus of good prices the previous year, reach 127,408 tons, but the average price of two cents per pound in 1905 drops back to one and six-tenths cents, approximating the low price that obtained previous to 1905, and yields a value of but $4,554,092.

The export trade in tobacco has been exceptionally active in 1906, in both leaf and the manufactured product. Leaf prices remain about the same as in 1905, but shipments are larger by nearly seven million pounds with an increase in value of four hundred thousand dollars. In manufactured tobacco exports there is also an increase to be noted amounting to $161,348. In the cigar trade there is a recovery from the figures of 1905 and a return to the million dollar mark of 1904, while marked increase is found in foreign sales of cigarettes. This trade heretofore has been insignificant, averaging only about fourteen thousand dollars annually, but in 1906 reaches the relatively large value of sixty thousand dollars.

Copra exports also furnish increased values in 1906 to the amount of $1,128,999. The quantity exported is only slightly greater, and the larger factor in this increase is to be found in the further appreciation in price of this important staple of the islands. With a total value of $4,373,702, it figures as a close competitor with sugar for second rank beside hemp in the export trade of 1906, and the steady and rapid annual increases in price in recent years would seem to assure the increased exploitation of this industry.

The tariff amendment passed early in the year by which the export duty on cocoanuts was discontinued has not thus far justified anticipations as the cocoanut trade for 1906 amounts to but $49. With the burden of freight against the fresh nut it is not probable that the growth of exports in this form will ever seriously encroach on the present large and growing shipments of the dried meat of the nut, though under the relief from export taxation recently granted a nut trade of some proportions may be built up with nearby countries.

Figures more suggestive of the possible development and future trend of the cocoanut industry are, however, to be found in the returns of 1906 under the head of cocoanut oil exports. This oil trade was an item of some importance down to the closing years of the Spanish regime, but during the American period has figured only nominally,—to the extent of a few hundred dollars annually at most until 1906 when exports of cocoanut oil reach a value of sixty-six thousand dollars. This sudden development is about coincident with the inauguration of an oil-extracting plant at Manila, and suggests the advent of a new factor in the cocoanut industry that may with time considerably modify the character of exports, and should further stimulate prices and production with a competing local demand for raw materials to challenge the established foreign trade in copra.

In summarizing the foregoing general review of Philippine commercial statistics in 1906 the salient feature is a largely increased credit balance in favor of the islands with reduced figures in both the import and export trade as compared with those of the previous year. With the elimination of the exceptional features of rice and opium the net reduction in general imports amounts to about a half million dollars, while the reduction of eight hundred thousand dollars in exports, though attended by heavy financial losses to the hemp and sugar industries, is coincident with increased export quantities in three of the four great export staples of the islands. Reduced values in the totals of both sales and purchases would indicate in itself an unsatisfactory trade condition for the year, but a consideration of the very favorable showing of 1905 with which the comparison is made, in a large measure discounts this conclusion. The elimination of rice leaves a general import trade in 1906 greater than that of either 1903 or 1904, while in spite of the disaster to the hemp crop the total export trade of the year is the largest in the history of the islands with the single exception of 1905.

TRADE BY COUNTRIES.

UNITED STATES.

Imports.

The trade of the United States with the islands in 1906 presents a generally discouraging aspect as compared with the previous year and the previous record of growth. Notwithstanding the lack of aid of any tariff advantages over other countries, imports from the United States have heretofore been characterized by a relatively steady annual increase during American occupation. From a trade amounting to less than a million and a half dollars in 1899 that has grown to more than five and a half million dollars in 1905, only in the general trade depression coincident with maximum rice imports of 1903 did United States imports fail to show substantial gains over the previous year, and this decline from the figures of 1902 amounted to only about three hundred thousand dollars.

American goods in 1906 suffered the first serious check to the progressively growing demand that has been shown in previous years of American occupation, and the decline in imports from the United States amounting to over a million dollars as compared with those of 1905 is out of all proportion to the reduction in the general import trade of the islands, and indicates from the standpoint of totals that the United States has borne something more than the whole brunt of the import decline for the year exclusive of the items of rice and opium. In this decline from $5,589,946 to $4,477,886 that places the United States again in the second rank and leaves the United Kingdom the largest exporter to the islands for the year, there is much to be explained on the basis of the exceptional character of certain large items of import in 1905 credited largely to the United States, while other items of exceptionally small trade in 1906 chance to be those of largely American origin. But after discounting these abnormal features a careful inspection of the figures in detail seems to indicate that the American exporter has not pressed his wares in our oriental possession during 1906 with the same energy,—or at least with the same success,—as in previous years.

The heaviest losses in American trade are to be found in the iron and steel schedules. In these as a whole the decline has been four hundred and thirty thousand dollars, and the exceptional character of the purchases in 1905 accounts in a measure for the reduced American figures in 1906. This is notably the case in electrical machinery, which is a trade almost exclusively American, but from small proportions Electrical machinery. rose to a value of nearly a quarter of a million dollars in 1905 and furnishes an American decline of one hundred and seventy-seven thousand dollars in 1906. Structural iron imports, in which the United States figured most conspicuously in the increased total of 1905, but has almost disappeared in the reduced figures of 1906, represent another loss of eighty thousand dollars. In the engine and boiler trade the United States and the United Kingdom have been active competitors and in the one hundred and eighty-eight thousand dollar total of 1905 the United States credit was one hundred and fifteen thousand, but in 1906 this is reversed with an American loss of seventy-eight thousand dollars. American typewriters are imported again to the value of thirty Typewriters. thousand dollars, but the monopoly of Nails. Steel rails. the market is not quite so complete as in 1905. In the sixty-six thousand dollar nail trade for the year, the United States makes gains and is credited with over half of the total, and the same is true of the American share in greatly reduced imports of steel rails. In this total of one hundred and ninety-three thousand dollars in 1905 the United States figured only to the value of twenty-two thousand, but in 1906 more than half of the fifty-eight thousand total is American. In sewing machines, however, the loss in the total for the year falls almost entirely on the United States, and a close competition with Germany in this field in 1905 leaves the American machine figuring only to the extent of eleven thousand dollars in the reduced total of forty-three thousand in 1906, while in pipes and fittings a drop of thirty-three thousand dollars, or nearly half of the 1905 total, is almost entirely at the expense of the United States. A large increase is to be found in the schedule of steel sheets and plates which imports amount to sixty-eight thousand dollars. In the smaller imports of previous years the United States has figured inconspicuously, so that the fifty-one thousand dollars credited to the United States for 1906 is in an almost entirely new field.

In the cotton trade is to be found another heavy American loss, amounting to $265,204. In raw cotton imports, which are made up almost exclusively of the American product, the ninety thousand dollar trade of the year represents only a nominal decline, but in the large imports of cotton cloths aggregating about four million and a half dollars in total value in each of the two past years, imports from the United States have declined from $699,756 to $471,192.

This serious check to the growing imports of American cotton cloths is attributed to the discriminating operation of the new tariff of 1905 against the product of the American loom, and a tariff amendment to correct this was passed by Congress in February, 1906. A review of the monthly figures since shows a marked recovery in the month of June from the very low ebb that this trade had reached in the opening months of 1906, while succeeding months show gains to such an extent that more than half the cotton cloth imports from the United States for the year are found in the last three months. If these figures be maintained American cloths will be speedily established as an active competitor of some importance in this field that is conspicuously British.

In the exceptionally small imports of illuminating oil in 1906, the United States with a trade reduced by $168,782 is credited with almost the whole of the trade reduction. Russian oil was a vigorous competitor with American in past years and the two practically monopolize the market, but reduced credits to Russia in 1905 have been further reduced by more than a hundred thousand dollars, until with a credit of only thirty-one thousand dollars in 1906 it becomes a nominal factor in these imports. The Russian loss for the year has been almost entirely appropriated by the Dutch East Indies, and for the first time this source of supply becomes a factor of some importance in the trade. American lubricating oil has fared better and the forty-eight thousand dollar credit in 1906 represents a slight gain as well as almost the whole of the islands' imports of this commodity.

The wheat flour trade reaches the maximum figure of $885,076 in 1906 and in earlier years was almost exclusively held by the United States, but with an increased total for the year of more than a hundred thousand dollars the United States has suffered an actual loss of seventy thousand, and furnishes but slightly over half of these imports. The advent of Australia in this field is coincident with the greatly reduced American wheat production in 1904, and, with a large increase in the succeeding year, becomes an almost equal sharer with the United States in the maximum imports of 1906. American consular reports refer to the aggressive competition recently shown by Australian flour in the Eastern market, and the Chinese boycott against American products that is given as a favorable factor in this Australian competition in southern China, doubtless figures to some degree in reduced Philippine imports of American flour. With the retail trade of the islands in the hands of the Chinese, with more than half the bulk of goods passing through the Manila custom-house consigned to Chinese merchants, and with more than two-fifths of the Manila importers Chinese, as stated in a recent government report, the boycott easily becomes a factor in the islands' trade, not only with regard to American flour but in the general decline in imports from the United States for the year.

Imports of beer, which have steadily declined from a maximum of nearly seven hundred thousand dollars in value in 1901, show a further shrinkage of sixty-five thousand in the total of $156,220 in 1906. This trade has been conspicuously American throughout and in the above total $97,681 is credited to the United States. But the American loss for the year considerably exceeds the total decline while an increase of some importance is to be noted in imports from Germany, the only other country figuring to any degree in the trade. In reduced imports of distilled liquors for the year the United States is also the heaviest loser. This trade, which in 1901 amounted to nearly a half million in value, is characterized by the same downward tendency noted in beer, and amounts to only two hundred thousand dollars in 1906. In earlier years the United States figured most prominently in this trade, but British gains together with American losses place the United Kingdom in the leading position in the reduced total of 1906. Local distilling and brewing are industries of some importance, and the local production of beer in particular is a factor to be considered in connection with the declining import trade.

There is a substantial gain of seventy-five thousand dollars in the three hundred and seventy-one thousand dollar total of lumber imports, and this is the highest figure reached in a trade that has steadily grown in volume during American occupation. In these imports, as in wheat flour, the United States and Australia are chief contributors, and in earlier years American lumber dominated the total. This situation was reversed in 1905 by a narrow margin, which, however, has not been maintained in 1906. In the large imports for the year Australia's trade is reduced to a value of but twenty-three thousand, which in the two hundred and ninety-two thousand dollars worth of these imports from the United States there is a one hundred and seventy-nine thousand dollar gain and a restoration to former supremacy with four-fifths of the total. In the case of furniture a reversal of conditions is found, and in a trade that has declined one-half, there is a loss of twenty-five thousand dollars in United States credits, and American furniture no longer represents half in the reduced total.

Lumber.

The islands' imports of canned goods are of considerable importance, aggregating an annual value in excess of half a million dollars. The United States, the United Kingdom, and Spain supply the great bulk of these. But though the United States still maintains a good lead under an increased total of $606,160, a slight loss is to be noted in contrast with gains of the other two countries. Condensed milk is the principal item and represents about half the total. This trade is held chiefly by the United States and United Kingdom, and in the United States credit of $111,319 is included an increase of twelve thousand dollars, but with larger gains the British trade considerably exceeds the American for the year. Canned salmon is very largely supplied by the United States, and in the increased imports of 1906 the sixty thousand dollars worth from the United States includes ten thousand dollars more than in 1905 and represents six-sevenths of the total. Canned fruits, imported to the value of $41,509, show a reduced trade and with a little less than half credited to the United States an American loss of eight thousand more than covers the reduction in the total. Canned beef has been imported almost exclusively from the United States, and a shrinkage from a value of twenty-three thousand to seven thousand dollars in these imports is practically a statement of the loss in the American trade. Imports of American canned vegetables, making up about half the total in 1905, are four thousand less in the increased total of $71,766 in 1906. In the general vegetable trade of the islands American potatoes have figured to some extent, but in the considerably increased purchases of $206,910 the American share of $25,526 represents a trade reduced by thirteen thousand dollars.

Philippine imports of paper and manufactures also represent a general value in excess of half a million dollars, but are smaller than in previous years. In a well distributed trade the United States holds the foremost position with a credit of $157,826 in a total of $553,899, and such has been the case in previous years. Spain has figured next in importance and in the book trade takes a prominent place, exceeding slightly the United States credit of thirty-two thousand dollars in the reduced total for the year. In imports of printing paper, as well as of writing paper and envelopes, about half the totals for the year are from the United States and make up slightly less than half of the total American paper trade, while in wrapping paper and blank books and headed papers representing smaller values the United States is credited with the foremost place.

Boot and shoe imports show considerable annual irregularity and in 1906 amount to $271,600 or one hundred and thirty thousand dollars less than in 1905. This trade has been in recent years to a large measure divided between the United States and Spain, with steady gains for the American product, and this tendency is maintained in the reduced total of the year. American sales amount to $169,296 with a loss of but thirty-one thousand dollars, while Spanish imports decline ninety thousand dollars, and from a supremacy in this field a few years since, equal but half the American figures for this year. Unmanufactured leather imports during the past two years are slightly more than half from the United States, and the American total of forty thousand dollars in 1906 includes a small increase.

Imports of copper and manufactures reach an exceptionally low level of $142,013 in 1906, and most of the reduction falls on the United States whose trade is less by forty-three thousand dollars. The United States and the United Kingdom contribute almost the whole of these imports and British gains in the face of a declining total restore to the United Kingdom the foremost position lost in 1905. In the somewhat more widely distributed brass trade the United States, with a loss of fifteen thousand dollars, still maintains the lead of former years with sales valued at $42,640 in a total of $138,075.

The record of previous years in the agricultural implement trade is maintained by a further increase of fifty-four thousand dollars in the total of $145,536 in 1906. The United States continues the chief contributor with a total of one hundred and one thousand dollars, and an increase of twenty-two thousand over the figures of 1905.

Under a miscellaneous schedule of scientific and electrical instruments embracing telephones, etc., is found a trade that shows large increases under American occupation. These imports amount to one hundred and ninety-four thousand dollars in 1906 and have been conspicuously of American origin throughout. The United States credits in this total are $159,141, and represent a gain of fifty-seven thousand dollars,—one of the most conspicuous for the year.

In imports of rubber manufactures the United States maintains her hold of previous years on more than half of the trade, and in the substantially increased total American rubber figures to the value of seventy-six thousand dollars with an increase of nineteen thousand dollars in the year's business.

Imports of gunpowder and explosives, which in 1904 and 1905 reached a value of nearly sixty thousand dollars, have declined to thirty-seven thousand and the fact that this trade has been for years past largely credited to the United States explains a reduction of nineteen thousand dollars to be noted in American shipments.

Oats and hay are items of import to the value of about eighty thousand dollars in 1906, of which the United States contributes almost the whole of the latter commodity and more than half of the former, but this sixty-five thousand dollars worth of animal foodstuffs represents a seventeen thousand dollar reduction in United States credits in a total that has declined even more.

This survey in detail of the leading items of American origin entering into the import trade of the Philippines in 1906, in a general way confirms the inference based on a reduction in the total imports from the United States being in excess of the whole reduction in the general import trade. While the reduction in American cotton goods is accounted for and some heavy declines seem to be due to exceptionally large figures in certain strongly American schedules in 1905, in a final analysis of the widely distributed items of trade in which the United States plays a leading part it appears that American losses are as a rule disproportionately large as compared with the total decline and that over a somewhat widely diversified field American goods have lost rather than gained ground in the Philippine trade of 1906.

Exports.

Philippine exports to the United States amount to $11,869,289 in a total export trade of $32,642,892 and this country continues to furnish the largest market for the islands' products, though the total value of American purchases for the year is smaller by about three million dollars as a result of reduced trade in sugar and hemp.

In consequence of the typhoon the export quantity of hemp is the smallest since 1900 and the reduction for the year has fallen somewhat more heavily on the United States than on the United Kingdom, the other leading consumer of this staple of the islands. American purchases are still in excess of half of the total exports, but in spite of the enhanced price per ton the American trade in hemp for the year is less by about a million and a half dollars. The reduction in exports of sugar to the United States is somewhat greater, being only about one-fifth the value of those of 1905, a trade of over two million shrinking to $422,111 and leaving China and Hongkong markets credited with almost the whole of the remainder in the four and a half million dollar total for the year. These American purchases of Philippine sugar, amounting to less than twelve thousand tons, are the smallest since 1902.

Reductions in export values of hemp and sugar to the United States are offset in some measure by increased purchases of several other insular products. Our consumption of Philippine copra, which has heretofore been only nominal, increases from eight to thirty-five thousand dollars, and in the practically new export trade of cocoanut oil appearing in 1906 the United States is credited with a value of thirty-nine thousand dollars, or more than half the total, while in growing foreign shipments of maguey fiber, which reach a value of nearly a quarter of a million, the United States takes seventy thousand dollars worth. The fourteen thousand dollar exports of cigars in 1905 are doubled, and the same is to be noted in American purchases of Philippine hats. This local industry, with foreign sales amounting to over two hundred thousand dollars, finds a market to the value of fifty-three thousand dollars in the United States. American purchases of leaf tobacco, of which there were none in 1904 and 1905, also figured in the returns for the year, but only to the value of six thousand dollars.

UNITED KINGDOM.

Imports.

That the British merchant and exporter has had a successful year in the Philippines is indicated by an increase in imports from the United Kingdom of $448,897 in the face of a reduced general trade, and in the British total of over five and a half million dollars in 1906 is found not only the largest contribution from any country but a recovery from the trade depression of 1903 and 1904 and an almost complete restoration to the larger volume of trade held by the United Kingdom in the earlier years of American occupation.

Considerably more than half of the value of imports from the United Kingdom is made up of cotton manufactures and in the increased cotton trade of the year the British gain is conspicuous. British cotton cloths imported to the value of $2,662,181 in 1906, include an increase of more than three hundred thousand dollars and represent almost sixty per cent of the total, with imports from the United States in the second rank valued at $471,192 and British East Indies in the third with $397,450.

while Switzerland follows with slightly more than a quarter of a million and Spain with one hundred and seventy-one thousand. In the largely increased total imports of cotton yarn and thread the United Kingdom leads with a value slightly less than half of the million and a quarter dollar trade and shares in the gain, though the larger gain is with Switzerland, and Japan's rank as second in these manufactures is still maintained with a trade amounting to $219,423.

In the heavy declines in some of the iron and steel schedules the United Kingdom shares and this is notably so in the case of steel rails in which the exceptionally large British shipments of $169,727 in 1905 decline to $25,744 and give to the United States a slight lead in this trade. Iron sheets and plates to the value of two hundred and eighty thousand dollars is a considerable feature in the British total. This class of imports is very largely contributed by the United Kingdom; and the same is true of structural iron and steel of which forty-three thousand of the fifty-one thousand total is British. In reduced engine and boiler imports, however, an increase is recorded at the expense of the United States, and one hundred and nineteen thousand of the one hundred and sixty-four thousand total is British, while imports of railway cars to the value of over two hundred thousand dollars from the United Kingdom dominate the year's total.

Structural iron.
Railway cars.

In both paint and linseed oil imports the United Kingdom has an established lead that is maintained in 1906. Of the total paint trade of one hundred and thirty-seven thousand dollars, about one-half is British as in previous years, with the United States and Germany as subordinate rival contributors, while total imports of linseed oil, amounting to forty-two thousand dollars, are seventy-five per cent from the United Kingdom and were even more exclusively so in the past.

Paints.
Linseed oil.

The position of the United Kingdom in the distilled liquor imports shows a slightly increased business in a diminishing total. In consequence of this, in 1906 for the first time the United Kingdom is found the largest contributor with a credit of seventy thousand dollars in the two hundred thousand dollar total, while the United States in the heavier imports of earlier years by far the largest contributor is credited with only fifty-two thousand dollars in the past year.

Distilled liquors.

Imports of condensed milk are characterized by a further growth of the increased trade shown in 1905 and reach a total value of two hundred and ninety-nine thousand dollars of which half are of British origin.

Condensed milk. This trade has been in a very large measure supplied by the United States and the United Kingdom in past years and American milk figures to the value of $111,319 in 1906, but the larger gain of the year is British, while steadily increasing imports from Switzerland reach a value of twenty-seven thousand dollars.

Exports.

Exports to the United Kingdom in 1906, amounting to $7,598,594 in value, are second only to those to the United States and are even more exclusively made up of the single item of hemp, only four hundred thousand dollars being credited to other products of the islands in the British purchases for the year. Hemp shipments to the United Kingdom show the effect of reduced production by a loss of $673,187 in value, while the sugar purchases of twenty-two thousand dollars in 1905 disappear entirely in 1906. These losses are, however, offset to a small degree by increased trade in other commodities.

Exports of maguey fiber, with a value of $238,036, show a considerably increased production, and this would seem destined to continue in view of the active interest shown by the insular bureau of agriculture in the stimulation of the industry and introduction of improved plant varieties and culture methods. The United Kingdom continues to be the leading consumer of the fiber, and with practically the same amount of purchases as in 1905, still takes more than half the total. The United States is a consumer to the value of seventy thousand dollars in 1906, and Japan, repeating her smaller purchases of the previous year, is the only other country figuring to any degree in the trade.

In the larger tobacco exports of 1906, the United Kingdom figures with increased values in both leaf and manufactures, but the leaf trade is relatively unimportant, and total British purchases of tobacco are but one hundred and twenty-six thousand dollars in value in a total of two and three-quarter millions.

In exports of copra to the United Kingdom a slight decline is to be noted in a relatively unimportant trade of seventy-two thousand dollars, while in the revived export production of cocoanut oil, which is divided between the United States and the United Kingdom, the British credits are twenty-five thousand out of the sixty-six thousand dollar total.

GERMANY.

Imports.

Germany's position in the import trade remains substantially unchanged at the low level of one million four hundred thousand dollars reached in 1904 after the larger business of earlier years, and only a nominal decline of thirty-one thousand dollars is to be noted in 1906.

German imports into the islands cover a wide range of commodities, and with few items of large value to give relief to a detailed analysis. Imports of cotton manufactures are valued at three hundred and twenty-eight thousand dollars, in which knit fabrics are the leading feature. Germany holds the second but very subordinate position in this large and conspicuously Spanish trade. A small increase is to be noted in German knit goods and a somewhat larger gain is to be noted in the eighty-two thousand dollars worth of cotton cloth imports.

German silks have held a very constant place in the Philippine market for years past in a steadily diminishing total trade, but drop from a value of seventy-five thousand dollars in 1905 to thirty-nine thousand in 1906, and a somewhat smaller reduction is to be noted in the forty thousand dollar trade in German woollens, though Germany still leads in these imports, which show an aggregate value of one hundred and sixty-three thousand dollars in the past year.

Imports of German iron and steel, amounting to slightly over a quarter of a million dollars, respond to the generally reduced trade with a loss of forty thousand dollars. Under this head German cutlery, amounting to $20,728, shows a reduced value of over one-half and no longer dominates the trade as in previous years. German sewing machines, however, have maintained the lead in the past and the thirty-one thousand dollar trade of 1905,—leaving the American machine virtually the only other in the market to bear the most of the reduced total.

In a declining beer trade, German beer imports amount to forty-nine thousand dollars, reaching the highest figure under American occupation, and for the first time assumes a competitive importance as compared with imports from the United States. German malt is exclusively imported in 1906 and to the value of forty-six thousand dollars, while imports of hops to the value of eight thousand dollars are almost entirely of German origin.

Glass and glassware imports in 1905 reached the low figure of $129,898, in which though Germany still led, it was with less than a third of the total.

In 1906 with a trade valued at fifty-three thousand dollars Germany regains her former prominence in this line, while a substantial doubling of her shipments of earthen and china ware is shown.

Under paper and book imports is found a value of sixty thousand dollars credited to Germany, of which printed books amount to eighteen thousand and printing and wrapping papers figure in smaller values.

Exports.

Exports to Germany show a general tendency to increase during recent years, and their total value of $774,737 in 1906 is more than double that in 1905. Both the increase and the great bulk of this sum is represented by copra, of which Germany is subordinate only to France and Spain as a buyer of this important Philippine product. Purchases of hemp to the value of forty-four thousand dollars and sixteen thousand dollars worth of cigars are the other leading items of export to Germany in 1906.

FRANCE.

Imports.

Imports from France, amounting to $793,879 in 1906, are one hundred and five thousand dollars less in value than in 1905, and continue the general decline that has characterized this trade since 1901.

A cotton trade of $83,679 in 1906 is less by five thousand dollars, but a wool trade of twenty-seven thousand dollars remains practically the same as in 1905. Silk textiles are furnished by France to the value of forty-nine thousand dollars in the greatly reduced total for the year.

French silks are still the leading feature in this trade, but with a reduction in value of thirty-two thousand dollars and with close competition in Germany and Japan, while China holds the silk yarn market.

Imports of jewelry show great annual irregularity, but in 1906 reach the exceptionally small value of $91,324. These imports in former years have been very largely of French origin and have been an important item of French trade, but though France figures to the value of $14,513, with a value of $44,820, she holds less than half of a total in which American and German jewelry begin to assume some relative importance. Imports of French jewelry are ninety thousand dollars less than in 1905 in a total trade that is reduced one-half.

Perfumery and cosmetics are also very largely purchased in France, but are of reduced importation in 1906, and the French figures show a shrinkage of twenty thousand dollars. In imports of distilled liquors France figures to the value of $14,513, due chiefly to her prominence in the brandy trade, but shares in the reduced total of these imports. Sparkling liquors and cordials are practically all from France who contributes thirty-three of the thirty-six thousand dollar total for the year.

Imports of watches amount to $56,760 in 1906 with values about equally distributed between the United States, Switzerland, and France, but with a nominal lead credited to the last mentioned country. American trade has been constant at about eighteen thousand dollars during the past four years, and in the reduced total of 1906 the loss has been at the expense of the larger French and Swiss trade of 1905.

In the paper supply of the islands France recovers her former position as close competitor with Spain for second rank in these imports, of which the United States is the most prominent contributor. Imports reach a value of nearly a hundred thousand dollars and include a recovery of thirty-five thousand dollars from the exceptionally small figures of 1905.

Exports.

France continues to purchase more heavily than to sell in the Philippine market, and though copra dominates the $2,783,365 total of exports to France in 1906 and explains in a large measure the increase for the year, exceptional purchases of tobacco are a factor of some importance.

French purchases of copra amount to $2,442,016 in 1906 and are still in excess of half the total, but show a marked decline from the seventy percent of these exports appropriated in earlier years, and emphasis is given to the growing importance of Spain and Germany in this trade. These exports reach a total of $4,373,702 and are more than a million dollars greater in value than in 1905, of which four hundred and forty thousand dollars represents the increased value to France. The bearing of higher prices on this increased value, however, is to be seen when it is noted that the quantity of French purchases is practically the same as in 1906.

Philippine tobacco has found only a small and irregular market in France in past years, and this leaf trade amounted to but $7,157 in 1905, but in the increased exports of 1906 French purchases reach an unprecedented value of one hundred and eight thousand dollars. Nothing exceptional is shown in shipments of cigars to France, amounting to $27,629, but they are only a small feature in a million dollar trade and the same is true of hemp exports to the value of $38,428.

Ilang-ilang oil is an export to the annual value of about ninety thousand dollars that throughout American occupation has found its best market in the French perfumery trade, and exports to France in 1906 amount to $76,925. The United States is the only other consumer of any importance in recent years, with purchases amounting to $15,490 in 1906.

The Philippine hat-making industry also finds its largest market in France, whose purchases in 1906 are seventy-five thousand of the two hundred and three thousand dollar foreign trade. France, however, took a larger value in the smaller total of the previous year, and both the United States and the United Kingdom show a growing interest in these insular products.

SPAIN.

Imports.

Imports of Spanish origin in 1906 amount to $1,642,644 and are more than three hundred thousand dollars less in value than in 1905. This serious decline, which is responsible for the smallest annual value credited to Spain under American occupation, is to be found chiefly in her large trade in cotton goods and in boots and shoes.

The Spanish cotton trade in the islands is of second importance only to the British, and during the past two years represents almost half of the total imports from Spain. Knit fabrics are by far the leading item, which class of imports are very largely of Spanish manufacture. Of the total value of seven hundred and ninety-three thousand dollars in 1905, six hundred thousand being from Spain, with Germany the only other contributor of any importance.

Cotton knit goods.

but in a slightly reduced trade in 1906 Germany gains while Spanish sales are less by thirty-eight thousand dollars. The heaviest loss of the year in the Spanish cotton trade is, however, to be found in cotton cloths with values that decline from $272,966 to $171,084, while a minor item of loss is to be found in cotton wearing apparel to the amount of thirty-four thousand dollars. These imports amount to but $57,368 in 1906, of which Spain contributes less than five thousand dollars. Imports of Spanish boots and shoes, reaching a value of more than three hundred thousand dollars in 1902 and 1903, have in the smaller and somewhat irregular trade of succeeding years diminished in favor of American purchases. In the reduced total of $271,600 in 1906, Spanish boots and shoes figure only to a value of $48,849, or only half that of the American, and are less by ninety thousand dollars than in the previous year.

Wines are an item of considerable importance in imports from Spain, and the Spanish character of these imports is shown in the figures of 1906 by shipments to the value of one hundred and thirty-three thousand out of the one hundred and forty-eight thousand dollar total. The wine trade remains substantially the same as in 1905, but is not as large as in earlier years. Olive oil imports show thirty-five thousand of the thirty-nine thousand dollar total for the year to have come from Spain.

Wines.

In the book and paper trade for the year Spanish purchases fall off about fifty thousand dollars, much of which is found under writing paper and envelopes and printing paper, while in the headed paper and blank book trade the Spanish lead of former years is not maintained. In reduced imports of printed books, however, Spain, with credits of thirty-eight thousand dollars, furnishes a somewhat larger value than the United States as in the previous year. Germany also figures in these imports but only to the minor value of eighteen thousand dollars.

Canned salmon is almost entirely supplied by the United States, but in a miscellaneous canned fish trade

Canned fish. that increases from ninety-seven thousand to one hundred and twelve thousand dollars. Spain maintains her prominence of previous years with a value of $93,758.

Imports of candles decline from a value of $69,395 to $53,693, but in this trade that was largely Spanish heretofore, Spain figures only to the value of $6,936 in 1906, while the British East Indies become the prominent contributor.

Exports.

Exports to Spain find a growing market, and in the total of $1,765,141 in 1906, for the first time during American occupation, exceed imports in value. This total is made up almost entirely of tobacco and copra exports in practically equal proportions. Hemp shipments to Spain for the year amount to less than five thousand dollars, and reach a minimum figure in a noninal trade.

Although exports of leaf tobacco notably increase in 1906, Spain takes a smaller quantity than in any year since 1899 and is credited with less than half in a trade that she has heretofore taken the larger portion of. Austria-Hungary is still a purchaser as in former years, while Netherlands and Belgium are new consumers on a somewhat large scale.

Leaf tobacco. Spanish purchases of leaf tobacco in 1906 amount to 11,497,677 pounds valued at $849,831, and if to this be added a small item of manufactures made up chiefly of cigars, Spain figures as the foremost consumer of Philippine tobacco to the value of $871,312 in a total trade of $2,843,004.

Spain, as a market for Philippine copra, is second only in importance to France, and Spanish purchases have been characterized by steady increases for several years past until in 1906 they reach a value of $878,030, or slightly in excess of the far older Spanish tobacco trade.

CHINA.

Imports.

Imports from China amount to $2,675,027 in 1906 and represent a reduced value of one hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars. A miscellaneous food-stuff trade enters largely into the Chinese total, and in several lines of the general food supply of the islands China occupies as distinctive a position as that held by the French East Indies in the rice trade.

The chief item of import from China is cattle. This represents a value of $869,020 in the total cattle trade of $949,011 in 1906, and contributes to the local fresh beef demand. China was even more exclusively the source of these imports in 1905, but the fact of the French East Indies entering this field with a trade of fifty-one thousand dollars is a feature in the figures of 1906.

Cattle.

Cattle from Australia are imported to but slight extent, and China's nearness to the insular market explains the strength of her position in imports of beef on the hoof, but the pressure of an indirect Australian competition is found in the large Australian trade in refrigerated beef.

The foreign egg supply of the islands is almost wholly Chinese, all but three hundred and ninety-six dollars worth in a trade of $262,621 being credited to this country in 1906.

Eggs.

These imports tend to exceed a quarter of a million dollars in value annually and are almost as exclusively Chinese in previous years.

Hog products are imported to a considerable extent from China. Fresh pork is exclusively supplied by Australia in her cold storage trade with the islands, while small imports of bacon are chiefly from the United States, but of lard purchases in 1906 to the value of one hundred and seventy-one thousand dollars, all but twelve thousand dollars worth was from China. To the same country is credited eighty-five thousand of the one hundred and forty-one thousand dollar total imports of hams and shoulders, and much the same prominence is to be noted in both the lard and ham and shoulder trade of China in earlier years.

Macaroni and vermicelli imports amount to seventy thousand dollars in 1906, of which sixty-six thousand are from China and this represents the condition of trade in previous years. Nuts are also an important and almost exclusively Chinese contribution, to the value of sixty-one thousand dollars in a seventy thousand dollar total, while in the miscellaneous shell-fish schedule forty-five thousand out of a forty-seven thousand dollar trade is from China.

Macaroni.
Nuts.
Shell fish.

Refined sugar is chiefly imported from China and Hongkong and variously credited in different years. In 1905 China was credited with a value of seventy-six thousand dollars and Hongkong with a smaller trade, but in the reduced figures of 1906, resulting from the competition of a local refinery recently put in operation, the situation has been reversed with Hongkong supplying almost the whole and China credited with less than six thousand dollars worth. In the tea trade, however, China is the principal source of supply, Japan and the British East Indies the two other important tea-producing countries contributing less than a fourth of the forty-one thousand dollar total of 1906.

In the vegetable trade China participates with a value of over sixty thousand dollars in imports of beans and pease, potatoes, and onions, though not as a leading contributor of any, and with considerably reduced values in the case of potatoes as compared with the trade of 1905.

In the cotton trade China is credited with a value of one hundred and ninety-six thousand dollars, and a loss of seventy-five thousand is to be noted in cotton cloths. In imports of silk and manufactures China leads all countries with one hundred and fifty-four thousand of the three hundred and fifty-seven thousand dollar total. These Chinese imports are chiefly of silk yarn and thread, though in the silk textile trade a somewhat close competition is shown with France, Germany, and Japan.

China has in recent years steadily lost ground in the opium trade of the Philippines in competition with the British East Indies, and in the reduced total of 1906, following increased taxation and legislative restrictions, China is credited with only forty thousand dollars or one-tenth of the year's trade.

Exports.

Total exports to China are more than double the value recorded in the previous year, and amount to $2,092,422. Chinese purchases of Philippine products to any considerable value are confined to sugar and the increased total for the year is made up to a great extent of this commodity.

With Hongkong credited as the largest buyer of Philippine sugar during American occupation, China has figured in direct purchases only in a subordinate way in previous years, and in the increased values of 1905, resulting from high prices, the United States and Hongkong were by far the most conspicuous purchasers. But in the reduced American purchases of 1906 China succeeds in great measure to the trade and is credited with a value of $1,860,715 and more than a million dollars increase.

Hemp shipments to China have been of relatively small annual values. There were none in 1905, but a showing of $59,160 worth is made in 1906. The Chinese trade in manufactured tobacco has, however, been more constant and of larger importance, and amounting to $125,780 in 1906 shares in the increased total of the year. Of this sum much the larger part is made up of cigars and represents a fairly constant demand, but in the notable increase in exports of cigarettes for the year China purchases to the value of twenty-two thousand dollars.

JAPAN.

Imports.

Imports from Japan in the trade of 1906 amount to $895,628, being a net gain of sixty-three thousand dollars. The most noteworthy features are a relatively large increase in her cotton trade and a practical withdrawal from competition with Australia in the supply of coal for the islands.

In the cotton trade with Japan a fifty percent increase is included in the total of $320,975 for the year. The bulk of this value is found under the item of yarn and thread, of which Japan is a contributor second in importance only to the United Kingdom. A substantial Japanese gain is to be noted in these largely increased imports of 1906, but a gain almost as large and more significant is found in the seventy-one thousand dollar imports of cotton cloths in 1906 as compared with the much smaller trade of previous years.

Japanese coal has found a subordinate and fluctuating but somewhat important place in the imports of the islands in previous years, and was credited with a value of $140,449 in 1905. But this declines to twenty thousand dollars in 1906 and leaves Australia in control of a trade exceeding four hundred thousand dollars in annual value.

In the supply of foreign matches Japan has no competitor of importance and is credited with $48,084 in 1906. This trade was somewhat larger in the past, but a local match industry has recently become an additional source of supply and is furnishing about half of the matches consumed.

Japanese silks figure with an import value of $39,607 and are only slightly less than in 1905, in striking contrast with the heavy reduction suffered by other important contributors to this trade.

Imports of potatoes amount to $206,910 in 1906, and Japan with a credit of $150,842 is even more prominent than in previous years. The United States continue to

In the onion trade of one hundred and seven thousand dollars Japan also ranks foremost, furnishing more than half, while China supplies a large part of the balance.

In imports of mineral waters the Japanese product retains the popularity of previous years and represents Mineral waters.

thirty-five thousand of the fifty-four thousand dollar total, while Japanese fans to the value of nineteen thousand dollars no less conspicuously supply the fan trade.

Exports.

Japanese purchases amount to but $380,020 in 1906, and reach the lowest value during American occupation. The six hundred and fifty-one thousand dollar total of 1905 was chiefly made up of hemp and sugar shipments, and heavy reductions in these explain the small credit of 1906. Hemp remains the leading export to Japan with a value of $217,836, and maguey figures to a minor value of thirty-nine thousand dollars. Philippine sugar that found a market to a value of over one and a quarter million dollars in 1903 has steadily declined and amounts to but $58,051 in 1906, while Philippine cigars valued at forty-four thousand dollars make a rather large showing in a relatively unimportant and irregular Japanese trade.

BRITISH EAST INDIES.

Imports.

Imports from the British East Indies are reduced by nearly a half million dollars in value, and amount to but $1,412,059 in 1906. This is the smallest sum since 1899 and is the result of exceptional conditions in the rice and opium trade, both of which have been large features in the total imports from this country.

The annual average of opium imports heretofore has been in excess of seven hundred thousand dollars, but in 1906 amount to only $410,770. Anticipation of higher import rates under the new tariff led to heavy trade in the first half of 1905 that offset the reduced importations of the latter half and give a normal total for that year. But in the early part of 1906 further taxes were imposed accompanied by legislation restricting the local sale and use of the drug, and the much reduced imports of 1906 may be considered as largely the result of increased taxation, restrictive legislation, and the consequent disorganization of the trade. Of the reduced total the British East Indies contribute $359,751, but this is one hundred and ninety-one thousand dollars less than in 1905.

The British East Indies has not figured to any great extent in the year's rice imports, though in the twelve and a half million dollar total of 1903, the maximum period of these imports, this country is credited with a million and a half trade. In 1905 a decline to $468,610 is shown, and in 1906 the British East Indies become merely a nominal source of supply in the diminishing need for foreign rice, credited with a value of only fifty thousand dollars.

In the cotton trade the British East Indies contribute regularly with annual totals of considerable value, and credits of $457,564 in 1906 are larger by eighty-eight thousand dollars than in 1905. Of the year's trade cotton cloths make up nearly four hundred thousand dollars, the balance being almost entirely yarn and thread.

Though the British East Indies contribute less than four thousand dollars worth of tea imports and leave this field to China, in the ninety-one thousand dollars worth of coffee imported this country furnishes sixty-eight thousand, while imports of cocoa amounting to one hundred and sixty-nine thousand dollars, are even more exclusively from this source.

Coffee.
Cocoa

Exports.

Exports to the British East Indies amount to $696,437 and are constant at about this figure in previous years. Of this sum, hemp makes up the leading feature and is valued at $206,576. Cigars find a market to the extent of one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, which is rather less than in the past, while copra is an item amounting to $84,488.

It is, however, in certain of the minor products of the islands that the British East Indies figure prominently and almost exclusively by virtue of an established Singapore market in certain of these commodities. In an export shell trade, made up chiefly of mother-of-pearl, amounting to one hundred and thirty thousand dollars, one hundred and seven thousand is credited to this country. Exports of gum copal and almaceiga, valued at about fifty thousand dollars annually, are even more exclusively destined for the British East Indies, while practically all the cordage exported, amounting to from twenty to twenty-five thousand dollars annually during the past four years, has been taken by this market.

Much has been said about the Philippines as a source of supply for gutta percha and the possibilities of the islands as to trade in a commodity the production of which is so limited. Exports not separately reported prior to July, 1904, amounted to only $4,782 in 1905, but reach a value of thirty thousand dollars in 1906, made up exclusively of shipments to the British East Indies.

FRENCH EAST INDIES.

Imports.

The history of rice imports into the Philippines is practically the history of the import trade with the French East Indies, and this is even more strikingly the case in 1906, when this country furnishes all but about a quarter of a million dollars worth of the total trade valued at $3,991,913. In the heavier imports of previous years, rice from British East Indies and Siam made up a larger proportion, and thus Saigon becomes more than ever the exclusive source of this diminishing dependence on foreign supplies for the great local foodstuff.

Other imports than rice to the value of only fifty-seven thousand dollars are credited to the French East Indies for the year, and this sum is almost entirely for cattle. These imports are very much larger than in any previous year, and though of relatively little importance as compared with the trade in cattle from China, are of interest as suggesting another possible nearby source of supply that may become a competitor in the existing Chinese monopoly.

Exports.

Exports to the French East Indies increase considerably over the nominal values of other years, but amount to only $54,567. The few thousand dollars worth of cigars taken in the past are supplemented by copra to the value of forty-eight thousand dollars in 1906.

AUSTRALASIA.

Imports.

Australasia continues the steady increase of previous years in its contribution to the import trade of the islands with a value of $1,567,111 in 1906, the factors for the increase for the year being coal and wheat flour, while these two items combined with fresh beef make up three-fourths of all imports of Australasian origin.

More than nine-tenths of the coal imports for the year are from Australasia in consequence of the practical withdrawal of Japan from this trade, Japanese credits of the previous year to the value of $140,449 falling to $20,977 in 1906. Coal imports are smaller than in recent years and show a steady annual decline since 1903, but Japan's withdrawal gives to Australasia an increase of more than a hundred thousand dollars in the reduced total of $426,751 in 1906.

The prominence of Australasia in wheat flour imports has been of rapid growth. Shipments from this source amounting to but $1,185 in the eight hundred thousand dollar total of 1903, constitute nearly half of the larger imports of 1906 and make a further encroachment to the value of one hundred and ninety thousand dollars upon this exclusively American trade of former years. The entrance of this new factor in wheat flour imports into the Philippines was coincident with very limited wheat production in the United States and with greatly increased Australian export production, and the market thus made first accessible by favorable conditions continues to be increasingly appropriated by Australasian flour.

The beef trade for the year, amounting to $401,681, is not so large by about forty thousand dollars as in 1905 though every pound of fresh beef imported continues to come from Australasia. A Fresh beef. continues to come from Australasia. A Pork and mutton. mutton and fresh pork trade, aggregat-Butter. ing fifty-eight thousand dollars, is also entirely Australasian, while butter from that source makes up three-quarters of the eighty-two thousand dollar imports.

Lumber from Australasia falls far short of the import value of $118,666 credited in 1905, when there was close competition with the United States, and, amounting to but $23,738, becomes a negligible factor in the larger total of $371,959 in 1906. This is the smallest value credited to Australasian lumber since its advent in 1903 as a factor in the insular trade.

Exports.

Exports to Australasia amount to $466,899 in 1906, but differ little in comparison with previous years either as to value or character. Hemp and cigars continue to make up practically the whole, with hemp purchases of $375,738 in 1905 reduced to $317,302 in 1906, while a ninety-five thousand dollar cigar trade is increased to one hundred and twenty-six thousand.

OTHER COUNTRIES.

Ninety percent of the Philippine import trade for the year is credited to the ten foregoing countries separately reviewed, but mention is made below of the leading features in the trade of other countries which figure somewhat conspicuously in the remainder of the islands' purchases.

Among these Switzerland takes the foremost place chiefly by virtue of a considerable cotton trade which makes up much the larger part of the total imports from this country valued at $587,651 in 1906, and is the dominant feature in previous years. Of this Swiss cotton trade, amounting to four hundred and eighty thousand dollars, cotton cloths make up two hundred and sixty-two thousand, while as a contributor of cotton yarn and thread Switzerland figures next in prominence to the United Kingdom and Japan with a value of one hundred and eighty-four thousand dollars. Among other imports of some importance are Swiss watches to the value of seventeen thousand dollars, a condensed milk trade of twenty-seven thousand dollars, and silk manufactures amounting to twenty-two thousand dollars. Exports to Switzerland, as in previous years, are of no importance.

With total imports from Hongkong amounting to $314,154, eighty-two thousand of this sum is for cement, the manufacture of which at Hongkong is an industry of considerable importance. A further amount of eighty-one thousand dollars is for refined sugar, which is also a manufacture of the British port. Thus the transshipment trade of Hongkong that is such a confusing factor in Oriental statistics, in the case of Philippine imports for the year is reduced to small proportions.
 In exports, however, the elimination of this feature is more difficult and of the total of $3,039,242 credited to Hongkong it is a matter of conjecture how much of this is for further distribution and how much enters into local consumption. Of this sum raw sugar is the leading item, valued at $2,213,215 of which as noted above a small return to the islands is made in the form of refined sugar to supplement the present inadequate supply furnished by the Manila refinery. Hongkong is the largest purchaser of sugar in 1906 and affords, as in former years, the best market for manufactured tobacco, being credited with three hundred and four thousand dollars worth of cigars of the million dollar total, and more than half of the fifty-nine thousand dollar cigarette trade. Hemp also to the value of $262,269 finds a market at Hongkong in 1906.

Imports from Belgium are valued at $288,365, of which more than eighty thousand dollars is found in the iron and steel schedules. A somewhat larger sum is found in the cotton trade, while wool and manufactures amount to $19,847.

Belgium.

Exports to Belgium are made up of about sixty-five thousand dollars worth each of hemp and copra and exceptionally large purchases of leaf tobacco to the value of $190,990.

Purchases from Italy amount to $220,591, of which cotton goods comprise one hundred and thirty-six thousand dollars, and hats and caps are an additional feature of $26,098. Exports to Italy are chiefly of hemp and copra and amount to $104,252.

Italy.

Netherlands figures in the import trade to the value of about two hundred thousand dollars, of which three-quarters is made up of cotton goods. Other imports are distilled liquors to the value of seventeen thousand dollars and cheese to a slightly smaller sum. Exports to the Netherlands are made up almost entirely of leaf tobacco of the exceptionally large value of one hundred and ninety-six thousand dollars, together with eighteen thousand dollars worth of hemp.

In paper imports Austria-Hungary figures to a value of forty thousand dollars, with the remainder of the hundred thousand dollar total made up of small and miscellaneous items. Exports of leaf tobacco, amounting to $284,821, are as in former years, the leading features in Austria-Hungarian purchases, which country continues to be of second importance to Spain in this trade.

Russia is noteworthy by her disappearance as an important factor in the illuminating oil trade of 1906. Imports of Russian oil, reaching a value of more than a quarter of a million in several past years, drop to thirty-one thousand dollars. Russia has never been a consumer of Philippine exports to any extent, and in 1906 becomes a negligible factor also in the import trade.

Dutch East Indies practically takes over the Russian oil trade of the previous year and from imports of fifty-four thousand dollars in value in 1905 is credited with $140,280 in 1906, and becomes a competitor of some importance with the United States in the supply of the Philippine market. Dutch East Indies. This is the chief import from the Dutch East Indies, and with coffee to the value of $16,478, makes up the bulk of the trade for the year. Tobacco makes up the most of an export trade of twenty-seven thousand dollars.

JANUARY-MARCH, 1907.

BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS

WAR DEPARTMENT.

EXPLANATION OF REGULAR STATISTICAL TABLES.

Imports.—The regular statement of imports of merchandise, by articles and countries, in this publication is what is termed the statement of general imports, embracing imported articles entered for immediate consumption on arrival and articles entered for warehouse.

The values of articles imported are governed by the regulations in effect April 9, 1900, which prescribe that the values of imported merchandise subject to duty shall be “the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise as bought and sold in usual wholesale quantities at the time of exportation in the principal markets of the country from whence imported, and in the condition in which such merchandise is there bought for exportation or consigned for sale, including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks, and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition ready for shipment.”

Exports.—The regular statement of exports, by articles and countries, in this publication includes the exports of domestic products or manufactures, and exports of commodities of foreign origin which have been changed from the form in which they were imported or enhanced in value by further manufacture.

The value of exports of merchandise is their value at the time of exportation in the ports of the island whence they are exported.

Tonnage tables.—In the tables of tonnage movement, the tonnage is stated in net tons of 100 cubic feet carrying space after the prescribed allowances are made for crew space, engine space, etc.

Weights.—In all tables published the ton weight is 2,240 pounds and the hundred weight is 112 pounds, unless indicated otherwise.

Customs districts.—Statements of imports and exports are shown by customs districts which have a certain prescribed limit of territory with a port of entry.

TRADE IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Market Conditions and Business Methods—Causes of American Failures.

There has recently appeared in Daily Consular and Trade Reports a series of extracts from a report by Special Agent W. A. Graham Clark on industrial and trade conditions in the Philippines. The following selections are published for the benefit of the American exporter, with the hope that these latest comments on his shortcomings and suggestions for his guidance may serve to further emphasize aspects of American trade in the Philippines that have been the subject of repeated comment in the past, both by the press and in the pages of the Summary:

If markets of the Orient are to be captured and held by Americans they must get a large number of their representatives entrenched in those markets within the next few years. The longer a movement of this character is delayed the more firmly will their rivals be established and the greater the difficulty in prevailing against them. If a manufacturer believes that he will need an outlet within the next few years he should have an agent out now studying the field. In all foreign markets there are certain peculiarities and requirements of the trade and fixed customs and habits of the people that must be thoroughly learned to obtain and successfully hold the market. The presence of American agents is always of the first importance. They should, if possible, be permanent agents.

Unfortunate Experience With An American House.

In the Philippines, in certain lines, the United States is well represented; in others scarcely at all. One of the largest jewelry houses in Manila, for instance, said that all their jewelry came from France; that they wanted to buy American jewelry, but no travelers came to see them. The last time a drummer for an American house called on them was about two years ago, the salesman being an Englishman, who had but a small line of samples. He seemed utterly indifferent as to whether he sold anything or not. They, however, placed an order with him for rush shipment, giving the American and other banks for reference as to their reliability. In two months word was received that the American house would ship nothing unless prepaid. The jewelers promptly wired the amount of the order and cabled the American house to this effect. The goods reached them finally 190 days after the order was placed, badly packed, and without a consular invoice. They had to give bond to the custom-house and write for the consular invoice. They said the goods, with the exception of one or two damaged on account of bad packing, were entirely satisfactory, and that they would like to buy more in the United States, but that the Americans had seemed so indifferent to their orders, and this shipment had given them so much trouble, they decided to continue ordering from France. In this instance there was no question of risk involved, as the importing firm is one of the largest in its line in Manila, and the standing of any firm in the city can easily be ascertained from the International Banking Corporation or from other banks.

Demands For Latest Styles In Jewelry—Credits.

It may be noted that Manila keeps fully abreast of the latest styles in the jewelry line, and that it is not a place that can be used as a dumping ground for articles unsalable elsewhere. There is in the Orient a chain of foreign jewelry firms, covering Hongkong, Shanghai, Tientsin, and Yokohama, that receive from Berlin, Paris, etc., the latest designs, exhibit them for a while at one place, and then forward the remainder to the next place. Some of these shipments are diverted to Manila and sold there, and the jewelry stores of Manila are filled with the best in their line.

The question of credit is one that is much discussed. Long-term credits are not the factor in the Philippine trade that they were under Spanish rule, but the system of cash before shipment or even cash on delivery is still a drawback to American trade. There is an American bank in the Philippines, and an inquiry at the home bank in the United States will furnish trustworthy information as to the standing of any merchant or importer in the archipelago. In shipping to reliable firms, when requested, four or six months' drafts or other favorable terms should be freely granted. Such a course would be safe and tend greatly to build up American business. The Philippines are a dependency of the United States, but all nations of the world compete at Manila, and Philippine trade is not dependent on the United States. This fact should not be forgotten.

Specific Packing Shortcomings.

In regard to packing it is the same old story of cases too light, using the same cases for "round the world" shipments that are used for "round the corner" shipments in the United States, and packing together goods of dissimilar kinds, such as jugs and hardware. Every manufacturer who reads commercial reports knows that there is complaint in a great many places in foreign lands as to American packing. When such packing is found to be creating a prejudice against American goods, it is to the direct interest of the manufacturer to have it reported. There is very considerable complaint as to the way American goods are received in the Philippines. Several specific instances of this have come under my observation. On the way to Japan from San Francisco one of the first men met was a Manila merchant returning from making purchases in the United States. He said he had been purchasing furniture, but that he had ordered nearly all his furniture, such as bookcases, bureaus, etc., without glasses or mirrors, and had written to Belgium for these. He ordered furniture from the United States because he could obtain better designs and better finish in the United States than in Europe, but he ordered the glass from Belgium because he had never been able to obtain a shipment of glass from the United States, either from the makers or from the furniture men, without part or all of it having to be carried away from the custom-house in baskets. The shippers tried to put too much heavy glass in a box and then use light boards with not enough packing. He had, however, ordered in the United States six large plate glasses for his store windows, because he had seen some that had just suited him, but he had misgivings for having done so.

Evidence of Bad Packing.

After a trip through Japan and Manchuria I went to Manila and met this same merchant in his store. He showed me some fragments of thick glass and said that of the six glass plates, each 6 by 8 feet by 5-16 inch thick, that had been shipped from Pittsburg, five had arrived smashed, so there was no possible way of using them. The manufacturers would, as usual, he said, claim that their responsibility ceased on shipment, and as he had to pay them in advance he had no recourse left. The shipping company claimed that they were not responsible, as the glass had evidently been carelessly, or at least insufficiently, packed. The loss of the five glasses fell on the importer. Not only this, but in order to get the one good glass out of the custom-house he had to pay duty on all six. He claimed to have lost over $200 gold by the careless packing of this glass, not to mention the annoyance and vexation of having to start in and order it all over again. Of course the new order went to Belgium.

This is one instance out of many. The matter of bad packing is not simply a subject for platitudes about the most scientific methods of packing, but is a live factor in preventing the United States from advancing as rapidly as the country should in the world's commerce.

Of all the articles shipped from the United States shoes are apparently the worst packed of any. According to one importer the Massachusetts makers of shoes are at the head of the class when it is a question of making shoes and at the foot of the class when it is a question of packing them. According to the customs officers it is the exception rather than the rule to have a shipment of American shoes come in where the case has not been smashed and some of the shoes either lost or stolen in consequence, while in European shipments the cases come through intact.

Correct Invoices Necessary.

In making out invoices for the Philippines it should be remembered that they should be made out in triplicate, and that one of them must be a consular invoice—that is, sworn to by an officer of the exporting company before the American consul in a foreign land or before a customs officer if in the United States. All three copies are sent direct to the importer at Manila, who keeps one and turns over the other two, one of which is the consular invoice, to the customs officers.

This consular invoice is always required unless the shipment is under $100 in value, and if not on hand when the goods arrive the importer has to give bond to the custom-house until it is produced, and of course he has to pay the cost of the bond, anywhere from $2.50 up, and the 50 cents stamp tax. There are dozens of these vexatious cases coming up every month where some American exporter forgot that the law requires a sworn consular invoice, and each time some busy merchant has not only to pay a few dollars for a bond, but has to lose time from his business to attend to executing it. It is a frequent annoyance to the Manila importer. It should be impressed upon the American exporter that triplicate invoices are required and that one of these must be a consular invoice. The law is explicit in regard to this, as shown by the following Treasury Department circular, No. 35, of March 30, 1906:

To collectors of customs and others concerned:

Section 22 of the act of March 3, 1905 (T. D. 26142), provides that shipments exceeding $100 in value "when brought into the Philippine Islands from the United States * * * shall be accompanied by an invoice similar in form to the consular invoices required for importations into the United States, but in lieu of execution by a consul of the United States such invoice shall be sworn to before a United States commissioner, collector of customs, or deputy collector of customs." This has been construed not to require certification, as in the case of invoices for shipments to the United States from foreign countries, but to provide in lieu thereof that the invoice shall be sworn to before a United States commissioner, collector of customs, or deputy collector of customs. Surveyors of customs at ports or subports where they are the chief customs officers are regarded as collectors of customs for this purpose.

Every such invoice must be made out in triplicate and marked "Original," "Duplicate," and "Triplicate," respectively, in the margin above the caption "Purchased by importer," on the back of invoices for purchased goods, and above the caption "Not purchased by importer" on the back of invoices for goods obtained otherwise than by actual purchase. The original should be retained by the officer before whom the oath is taken; the duplicate delivered to the person swearing to it, and the triplicate sent promptly by mail, or by the master of the vessel, to the collector of customs at the port of entry in the Philippine Islands.

The names of both seller and purchaser must appear in the invoice of purchased goods. Such invoice must also show the time and place of purchase, the actual cost of and charges on the merchandise, and contain a correct description of the merchandise, with the marks and numbers and gross and net weights in the terms of the Philippine tariff, or quantities, as the assessment of duty may require. It must be sworn to by the purchaser or seller, or by an agent of either having knowledge of the facts, who must be identified as the person whose name is signed to the oath.

The invoice for goods obtained otherwise than by actual purchase must be signed and sworn to by the manufacturer or owner, or the agent of either. It must show the actual market value or wholesale price of the merchandise at the time of shipment to the Philippine Islands, with all charges thereon, and contain a correct description of the merchandise, with the marks and numbers and gross and net weights in the terms of the Philippine tariff, or quantities, as the assessment of duty may require.

No charge will be made by a customs officer for the jurat.

Blank invoices will be sent by the Secretary of War to United States customs officers, and also to United States commissioners upon request.

Description of Goods.

In making out an invoice Americans, as a rule, give as few details as possible, while the Germans and Swiss sometimes give more than is necessary. Instances are not infrequent where the importing merchant is fined for false declaration of goods, when the fact was that he could not obtain the information required from the invoice. A clear, detailed invoice facilitates very much the work both of the importer and of the customs officer. First of all, definitely name the article. Do not class an article as furniture without saying whether it is an iron bedstead or a marble-top bureau or a wooden washstand. If Turkey-red shirting is in the cases it is better to say so than to label it "Cloth" or "Cotton goods." Some invoices only show the number of the article in the catalogue, which is a source of trouble to the importer, as he is often unable to declare his goods properly, even if he has the catalogue. Of course, every package shipped should have a number clearly marked thereon, and a corresponding number on the invoice. The following details should show on each invoice sent out: The gross and net weight, the price per unit, and the total price. It is also better to give the dimensions of the case, and such other details as will facilitate the entry of the goods. In the case of cotton goods, for instance, it would be best to give the width of the goods, the total number of threads per 6 square millimeters, and the kilograms per 100 square meters. Any one of these may make an appreciable variation in the duty, so that the exporters, by supplying these, frequently save the importer much work and the goods unnecessary handling at the customs. When a hundred cases of prints are imported on a clear-cut, detailed invoice, ten are opened at random, and if found to conform with the declaration the whole hundred are turned over to the importer without further delay; but if the declaration is indefinite or uncertain, or there seems a disposition to hide necessary details, each case is examined.

Catalogues and Cable Codes.

The finest catalogues in the world are issued by American firms, but these are not always as practical from the viewpoint of the long-distance purchaser as they are from that of the near-by purchaser. For the Philippines, catalogues should be issued in English and Spanish, and those sent that fit the case. In either case the catalogues should be tastily gotten up, but above all in a business-like way. Use large, clear type and good paper. Some kinds of glazed paper, with faintly inked letters, half hidden by veins or scroll work around the edges and corners, may make an artistic catalogue, but one hard to read in the glare of the Tropics. The name and address of the firm should be on the front and on every page, and each catalogue should have a comprehensive index.

For foreign use, at least, it is necessary for each article to have a code name. From the Philippines the cable rate per word is $1.12, and every word in the address and signature is paid for at the same rate.

It saves so much time, however, that the cable is used as fully as the telegraph in the United States, but naturally a preference exists for the house that has a code word for each article offered. Both weight and measurements of articles should be given in the catalogues. Usually goods overland go by weight and goods by Suez by measurement, so it is important for a foreign merchant to have both, in order that he may see how to order his goods routed to best advantage. The weight should be stated both net and boxed. The measurements of the box should be given in cubic feet. Catalogues should clearly and explicitly describe the goods, their requirements and possibilities. Over a half dozen testimonials are regarded as a nuisance and rarely read.

Prices and Discounts—A Source of Annoyance.

Price quotations in American catalogues are an unfailing source of annoyance to foreign buyers. They are bad enough in the United States where the people are accustomed to them and know somewhat the system of so many trade discounts; but to an outsider they are exasperating. The belt manufacturers, for instance, publish annually a list of standard prices on belting. Each manufacturer sends his drummers out and each quotes a different discount. One belt man may give his best customer 70, 10, 10, 5, 2½, 1 per cent off the list price. He may give another man five of these discounts, or 70, 10, 10, 5, 2½ per cent off, and so on down. It is the same in other branches of business. It is a trade annoyance, and the object could be as well obtained by varying two discounts. The English and other shippers to the Philippines rarely have more than one discount, sometimes two, say 5 and 2 per cent. That is easy, but if a man has to figure out prices from an American catalogue he has to wade through such figures as 40, 15, 10, 7½, 5, 2½, 1½ per cent, or 62½, 16 2-3, 12½, 10, 10, 5, 5, 2½ per cent. The merchants here complain that after they have spent a day trying to ascertain what the American manufacturer actually quotes in this roundabout way and orders the goods, he then finds that the price quoted was for a month or three months only, and that the combination hiding the price is now an entirely new one.

Prices given in catalogues should either be upheld for a reasonable length of time or not given at all.

Separate price sheets are preferred by some, but these get lost and then the catalogue is useless. It would probably be best to give general prices in catalogues, so that prospective buyers can get some idea of the prices, and then quote not over two discounts to the wholesale men. Under present arrangements each merchant thinks that the other man is getting one more discount than he does. Prices are usually quoted at the works. One of the largest importers said he hoped I would bring out the fact that in Manila, at least, the importer wanted his prices quoted always "free on board vessel." Even New York prices were deceptive, as sometimes he was charged cartage to the ship and sometimes not; sometimes the cargo was loaded at the pier and sometimes he had to pay lighterage, etc. On many things imported the margin is close. A merchant must figure carefully, and a lot of extras that could not be calculated may upset his plans and change a profit to a loss. Extras of any kind are disliked by an importer for this reason, and whenever possible should be included in the quoted price.

Chinese Stores.

There are a large number of Chinese in the Philippines. Practically the Chinese carry on the business of the islands. They are the middlemen who transact the business between the foreigner and the native. They do most of the retail business in Manila itself, and their little shops are to be found in every corner of the islands. Usually their shops are clustered together.

Frequently there are six or seven little shops side by side, apparently different stores, but all owned by one man. This is due, it is said, to the custom of having a sliding scale of prices, and then gradually reducing the price asked. It reminds one somewhat of the "list" prices in the United States with 80, 20, 10, 7½, 5, 2½ per cent off. This system, in a different way, has been in operation in the Philippines so long that the natives do not comprehend there can really be such a thing as a fixed price, and are not satisfied unless they get some reduction, or "consolation" as they call it. A Filipino goes into the first of a group of stores and prices something. A fixed price is named, say $2, but he declines to pay over $1. He goes to the next store and the first man sends word by the back door to the other stores. The purchaser, therefore, gets a lower fixed price at each store. Perhaps at the fourth he is offered the article for $1.50, and thinking the 50 cents "consolation" enough, takes it, but if he keeps on he probably gets the article at his own figure. This system prevails throughout the islands.

Before shipping goods to the Philippine Islands the manufacturer should study the Philippine tariff. A copy can be had from the Bureau of Insular Affairs at Washington. Some goods are dutiable on gross weight, some on net weight, and some ad valorem. Goods of various classes should not be packed in the same case. By studying these and other details the exporter can save the importer trouble and expense, and make the business more satisfactory to both parties.

APRIL-JUNE, 1907.

PREPARED IN THE

BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS

WAR DEPARTMENT.

EXPLANATION OF REGULAR STATISTICAL TABLES.

Imports.—The regular statement of imports of merchandise, by articles and countries, in this publication is what is termed the statement of general imports, embracing imported articles entered for immediate consumption on arrival and articles entered for warehouse.

The values of articles imported are governed by the regulations in effect April 9, 1900, which prescribe that the values of imported merchandise subject to duty shall be "the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise as bought and sold in usual wholesale quantities at the time of exportation in the principal markets of the country from whence imported, and in the condition in which such merchandise is there bought for exportation or consigned for sale, including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks, and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition ready for shipment."

Exports.—The regular statement of exports, by articles and countries, in this publication includes the exports of domestic products or manufactures, and exports of commodities of foreign origin which have been changed from the form in which they were imported or enhanced in value by further manufacture.

The value of exports of merchandise is their value at the time of exportation in the ports of the island whence they are exported.

Tonnage tables.—In the tables of tonnage movement, the tonnage is stated in net tons of 100 cubic feet carrying space after the prescribed allowances are made for crew space, engine space, etc.

Weights.—In all tables published the ton weight is 2,240 pounds and the hundred weight is 112 pounds, unless indicated otherwise.

Customs districts.—Statements of imports and exports are shown by customs districts which have a certain prescribed limit of territory with a port of entry.

GENERAL STATEMENT OF PHILIPPINE COMMERCE FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 1907.

The most noteworthy features in the Philippine foreign trade for the fiscal year 1907 are an increase of nearly three million dollars in the value of imports as compared with the exceptionally small trade of 1906, a continued reduction in foreign rice purchases, and an export trade that is the maximum in the history of the islands.

Total imports reach a value of $28,785,855, and though this has been exceeded in earlier years, it is to be borne in mind that the larger figures were coincident with heavy imports of rice, which local production is now steadily displacing. Eliminating this abnormal element from consideration, the remaining general import trade for the year is exceeded only by that of 1902, and indicates a healthy recovery from the reduced purchases of 1906, with increases to be noted in a large number of commodities. Exports reach a value of $33,713,357, or more than half a million dollars in excess of any previous fiscal period, while an increase of $1,796,223 is recorded over the export total of 1906. The figures for the foreign trade of the islands during the fiscal year, therefore, show from the standpoint alike of imports and exports, not only a recovery from the reduced totals of 1906 but also a favorable comparison with earlier years.

The cotton trade is the most conspicuous feature in Philippine imports, and in it are found the largest increases for the year. Purchases of cotton manufactures reach the exceptionally large value of $8,320,079,—exceeded only in 1901,—and show an increase of $1,677,750. Substantial growth is to be found in yarn and thread as well as in knit goods, but the notable gain is in cotton cloths. More than half of this cotton cloth trade remains British, but the greater part of the year's increase is appropriated by the United States, whose trade grows from $222,951 to $1,016,036, and recovering from the heavy decline following the passage of the tariff of 1905, considerably exceeds any previous record. This favorable development of American trade is to be largely credited to the operation of the tariff amendment of February 26, 1906, designed to correct the unfortunate effect of the new tariff on American prints.

In the iron and steel trade an increase of about three-quarters of a million dollars is to be noted. While this sum is distributed throughout a number of schedules, locomotives, steel rails, sheets and plates, structural materials, and pipes and fittings show the largest gains. Seventy-five per cent of the islands' purchases of iron and steel are from the United States and the United Kingdom, but American products lose their foremost place in 1907.

Rice imports amount to $3,662,493, and are 713,007 less in value than in 1906, while the French East Indies becomes more exclusively the source of this diminishing foreign supply required to supplement the local product. Wheat flour imports increase and reach a value of $889,174, but this once almost exclusively American trade suffers a further invasion by the Australasian product, which, after steady annual gains, in 1907 takes the foremost place in the Philippine market.

The foreign cattle trade amounts to $1,058,824 and shows an increased value of $230,618. The French East Indies appeared for the first time in this field as a minor competitor of some importance in 1906, but fails to profit by the enlarged market, and is credited with only $47,080 in a trade that is almost exclusively Chinese. Coincident with heavier purchases of cattle is to be noted a considerable shrinkage in fresh beef imports, which decline from a value of $411,240 to $242,694 and are of exclusively Australasian origin as in the past.

Imports of illuminating oil are more than double the exceptionally small value shown in 1906 and amount to $790,347, more than two-thirds of which is credited to the United States. Russian oil, which in earlier years dominated the market, sinks to a value of only $4,608, but a new and important contributor is to be noted in the Dutch East Indies with a trade of $198,808.

Opium imports are valued at $513,287 and show a substantial increase over the greatly reduced trade of the previous year coincident with an increased tariff and internal revenue taxation and supervision of the traffic, but are still considerably below the figures prevailing prior to restrictive legislation.

Total imports from the United States amount to $5,155,359 and show an increase of $821,466. But almost the whole of this gain is to be found in the single item of cotton cloths previously referred to, and in the considerable increase to be noted in the remainder of the islands' general import trade American goods share but slightly, presenting a practically stationary average with the preceding year.

In the favorable showing of the export trade as a whole the largest increases are to be found in hemp and tobacco. Copra shipments yield practically the same figure as in 1906, but sugar suffers a heavy reduction in value.

Hemp exports amount to 112,895 tons and are but a nominal increase over the reduced quantity marketed in the previous year. Higher prices are the leading factor in an increase of more than a million and a half dollars included in the total of $21,085,081 for 1907. Of this sum American purchases represent slightly more than half.

Marked export activity is characteristic of the tobacco trade in both leaf and manufactures. A total value of $3,129,194 is reached, of which $739,304 is the increase recorded for the year. Of this increase leaf tobacco makes up nearly a half million dollars, cigars are credited with $147,371, and a notable gain of $87,467 is found in foreign purchases of cigarettes that in 1906 amounted to only $16,801. The United States takes no leaf but is credited with cigars to the value of $26,067.

Copra shipments suffer a reduction of twenty-five per cent in quantity, but in consequence of exceptionally high prices show a nominal increase in value, and the four million dollar trade of the previous year is maintained.

The sugar industry makes the least favorable showing of the four great export industries of the islands, and between a somewhat reduced quantity and a decline in prices a reduction of $929,405 is recorded for the year. Sugar exports amount to 118,395 tons valued at $3,934,460, and find an almost exclusively oriental market, with shipments to the United States amounting to but $234,074.

While ninety-five per cent of the export trade of the islands is made up of the items referred to, increased foreign sales is a noteworthy feature in many of the minor Philippine products, such as maguey, gums and resins, hats, shells, cocoanut oil, etc., in which miscellaneous trade is to be found an increased value of over three hundred thousand dollars.

Free-entry Railway Supplies.

Under the act of Congress of February 6, 1905, the Philippine government was authorized to permit the free entry of railway construction and equipment supplies in connection with the establishment of a railway system for the islands under government guaranty. With the granting of franchises to the Manila Railroad Company and the Philippine Railway Company this privilege became operative about the beginning of the fiscal period under consideration.

These imports assumed little importance prior to January, 1907, but have increased in succeeding months, amounting to $879,759 for the year, and are expected to assume considerable proportions during the next few years in which the lines contracted for must be completed. In view of the exceptional character of these imports, destined to assume large proportions—but for only a short period, their inclusion would seriously inflate the normal trade figures, and are, therefore, excluded from the ordinary commercial returns as has been the usage with government free-entries.

In the following statement of these imports it will be noted that the United States is the foremost contributor and to the value of $508,524, while the United Kingdom occupies the second rank, and Australasia with large supplies of timber makes up the most of the balance. Purchases for the Visayan lines are largely from the United States, but the Luzon system, preserving the British traditions of the original Manila-Dagupan line of which it is an expansion, is credited with heavy purchases from the United Kingdom.

The importance of cotton manufactures in the import trade of the Philippines is to be measured by the fact that they represent more than twenty per cent of total imports. With a cotton trade amounting to more than six million dollars per annum and far exceeding in value any other class of imports, much interest attaches to a report recently made by Special Agent W. A. Graham Clark to the Department of Commerce and Labor upon this branch of the islands' trade. The report is an important contribution concerning market conditions in a field where American cottons are finding favor, and furnishes technical data in much detail addressed especially to the American manufacturer and exporter. The value of the information toward the extension of the American cotton trade in the Philippines warrants the following selections:

Cloths Imported.

WHERE THEY COME FROM AND PRICES PAID.

Four classes of cotton cloths are now imported into the Philippines—white shirtings, white drills, betilles, and prints. The two first named come from England, betilles (also called Swiss muslin) from Switzerland, and cotton prints (since the tariff law was corrected) from the United States. In addition, cotton yarn is imported from Japan, England, Scotland, and Switzerland in about equal quantities, knit cotton undershirts from Spain, and hosiery from Germany. These are the main cotton textiles imported and the principal countries in each line. Details in regard to these, also details of other minor fabrics, are herein given, so that the American manufacturer can gather some idea as to whether it would pay him to attempt the market.

To ascertain this the first object is to learn the prices at which competitors are selling. Retail prices depend on the individual seller's idea of profit and the competition in his section, so that retail prices vary greatly between two neighboring towns, or even in the same town. Wherever possible, therefore, invoice prices have been obtained, which show exactly what the importing merchant is now paying. The usual retail selling price is 20 to 50 per cent higher, as duty, charges, and profit must be allowed for.

Textiles are imported into the Philippines from all countries. There is not a manufacturing country in the world that is not represented on the market at Manila. In giving the construction of goods it is customary in some cases to give the ends each way per quarter inch and in other cases per inch. The constructions are here given in ends for inch. As is customary, warp ends are given first; thus 60 by 56 means 60 warp ends per inch of width and 56 filling or weft ends (i. e., picks) per inch of length.

WHITE SHIRTINGS.

The tariff is based on weight, and thread counts in a square of 6 millimeters (millimeter = .03937 inch) and does not, as does the Chinese tariff, specify the different cloths by name. There is, therefore, no way of ascertaining the exact proportion of each cloth imported. There is no doubt, however, but that the largest single item is white bleached shirtings. This white shirting is very extensively used and is a large import, probably $1,000,000 worth a year. It is mainly used for clothing, especially in the provinces, where it is used for trousers, shirts, and underclothing, large numbers of the men wearing no other kind of cloth at all. There are many varieties of white shirting, but that mostly imported here is the medium, not the very heavy, starched goods.

In China a usual white shirting imported is 38½ inches wide and 38½ yards long. The white shirtings imported into the Philippines vary from 24 to 77 inches wide, from 20 to 50 yard lengths, and the constructions from 56 by 48 to 80 by 80 ends per inch. The most usual form of white shirting imported here is a pure size, rather soft (medium) finish, 34 to 36 inches wide, 40 varas (= 36½ yards) long, and, say, 72 by 56 ends per inch construction. The present invoice price on this is about 4½ cents a yard. Besides its large use for clothing, white shirting is used for sheets, pillow cases, and other domestic purposes. It is not sold, as are sheetings, by weight, the market price depending on the finish, amount of size, perfection of weave, width, etc., the general appearance and feel of the goods being the controlling factor. A few prices from recent invoices were as follows:

These are actual invoice prices from shipments received during November and December, 1906. All in the list came from England. From the United States there has been practically none imported, but small quantities are now beginning to come in, mostly 36-inch widths, and this large field should be cultivated by American manufacturers. In the Orient American bleaching is regarded as imperfect, but there has been a great improvement in this regard in recent years and it is now almost, if not quite, equal to the English. As shown on their invoices, the English charge about two-thirds of a cent per yard for bleaching.

LOCAL MEASURING SYSTEM—PACKING.

In the foregoing list of recent shipments it will be noticed that 36½ yards seems a common length. This is really 40 varas, and is so marked on the pieces. The vara is the Spanish linear measure, and is more widely used in the Philippines even now than the English yard or the meter. If one goes into a native or Chinese store in Manila and asks for 10 yards there are usually measured off 10 varas, as the "yardstick" used is a vara long. A vara is 0.927222 yard, or 33.384 inches, so in this case the buyer taking the Filipino yard loses 2.616 inches to the yard. Some of these white shirtings imported are simply the ordinary 36-inch, 40-yard sheeting bleached, and on these the price varies from 57½ to 77½ cents. A large shipment of these just in were 50 pieces, or 2,000 yards, to the case, and were marked as 548 pounds gross, 443 pounds net weight. These were therefore 4.5 yards to the pound goods. In this instance the tin-lined cases were charged for extra at $2.75 a case.

All of these white shirtings are shipped in tin-lined cases, and sometimes this is included in the invoice price and sometimes put down separately. The former method is much preferred by the buyers, as "extras" disarrange their calculations and are never favored by them. The charges for cases vary from 49 to 73 cents up to $2.92 gold, and the buyer never knows how much he is going to be levied on, as it is rarely the same on two consecutive shipments. These tin-lined cases are carefully soldered, and the boxes are stoutly made, ¾-inch plank being used, reenforced with two to four iron bands or with short iron ties crossed at the corners. Usually fifty pieces of about 36 yards are put in these cases, divided up into packages of five bolts each, wrapped in tissue paper and then with stiff wrapping paper. Before these are put in the casing is lined with heavy wrapping paper, usually waterproof, so that the cloth is well protected.

NAINSOOKS, WHITE LAWNES, AND DRILLS.

Closely allied to white shirtings is the white cotton nainsook, which is practically a fine white shirting. This also comes from Manchester, and the main quality is a pure sized, 30 to 31-inch, 108 by 96 ends per inch construction, coming in 18-yard lengths. The present invoice price is $1.07 per 18-yard piece, which is about 6 cents a yard. In China white is the badge of mourning, while most clothing is dyed some color, usually blue. The Philippines is more of a tropical country, and white is universally worn, and white goods, whether shirtings, nainsooks, drills, cotton duck, lawn, or what not, is in much larger use than any dyed goods.

The white lawns imported include the ordinary goods, averaging about 72 by 64 ends per inch to Victoria lawns averaging about 92 by 92, or Persian lawns averaging about 100 by 100 or over. A white lawn 29 inches wide, 10 varas (9.14 yards) in length, 60 by 56 ends per inch, is now invoiced at 3 cents a yard. Another, 25 inches wide, 9.14 yards long, 68 by 68, is invoiced at 45 cents per piece or 5 cents a yard. This last is also heavily sized. The Victoria lawns, which are finer grades of lawns, are 24 to 26 inches wide, and the main constructions are 92 by 92, 96 by 84, 80 by 72 ends per inch, respectively. The 26-inch, 92 by 84, is now invoiced at 49 cents per 10 varas piece, or $5\frac{1}{3}$ cents a yard. The main Indian lawns imported are invoicing at \$1.99 per 24-yard piece, 30 inches wide, or $8\frac{1}{4}$ cents per yard, and at \$2.25 per 24-yard piece, 36 inches wide, or 15 cents a yard. The Persian lawns also come in 24-yard lengths and are mostly 32 inches wide. The prices on white cotton Persian lawns range from $7\frac{1}{2}$ to $10\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard, while on the white mercerized cotton Persian lawns, which are also 32 inches by 24 yards, the price ranges from 9 to $16\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard. These are all prices taken from recent invoices, and, roughly speaking, the retail prices are 40 per cent higher. They are nearly all imported from England. These all come carefully packed in tin-lined boxes, and for making up and packing the present charges, as shown on invoices, run from \$2.92 to \$14.60 a case. This includes case, tin lining, tissue-paper wrappings, special labels, etc. The weight of the lawns run from ten yards to the pound or more, some of the heavier starched white lawns weighing about 13 yards to the pound for the Indian lawn, and up to 16 yards to the pound for some of the finer Persian lawns. Lawns fall under paragraph 118 of the tariff. An ordinary Victoria lawn, 23 by 23 ends per 6 square millimeter, would pay a duty of 50 cents per kilogram of 2.2 pounds, or, say, 2 cents a yard duty.

DRILLS FOR SUITS.

One of the most largely imported cloths is white drills, for men's suits. The climate is such that one weight of cloth can be worn all the year around, and a large proportion of the men in the cities, foreigners and natives, wear only drills. These are not the drills shipped by the southern mills in such large quantities to China, especially to Manchuria, which are gray goods, and all three-harness twills. The drills that are used so largely for clothing, taking the place of white duck, are not twills—that is, ordinary twills—but are satin weaves. In a regular twill weave every pick is interlaced with the warp in the same manner, but each successive pick commences one end farther to the right or to the left, thus enabling each end to be bound into the cloth in regular order, which produces the diagonal effect or “twill”. In satins the picks are arranged differently, as it is intended to obtain an even surface, free from the bold diagonal lines of a twill, and thus the points of intersection are more distributed.

A good many satin weaves are used for white drills, but the greater portion are made with five-harness, and the order of lifting is 1, 4, 2, 5, 3. Some are made with the straight draw 1, 3, 5, 2, 4. The figures refer to the order of lifting the heddles in weaving. In making these goods the proportion of warp to filling, or weft, is usually about two to one, as with the warp predominating a cheaper fabric is produced, less time being required to weave a given length. These drills are made in widths and lengths to suit the customer, but usually come 24 to 25 inches wide (61 cm. = 24 inches) and in lengths of about 30 yards. The prices vary with the construction, weight, and finish, but some recent invoice prices were $7\frac{1}{4}$ cents per yard for some drills $24\frac{1}{2}$ inches, 132 by 84 (warp and filling ends per inch); $7\frac{1}{2}$ cents for some 25 inches, 132 by 80; $8\frac{5}{8}$ cents for some 24 inches, 140 by 92; 8 cents for some 24 inches, 96 by 80; and $9\frac{1}{8}$ cents for some 24 inches, 140 by 80. Generally speaking, the invoice prices are running from 7 to 10 cents a yard, and of course the retail prices are much higher. There is a very large quantity of this used, and nearly all of it comes from England.

BLUE, GRAY, AND CHECK DRILLS.

Of the regular three-harness gray drilling there is very little imported, and what is brought in comes either from Japan or England. The natives also weave some drills on hand looms, producing a small amount. In a Chinese shop at Manila I saw three pieces of 3-yard drills selling side by side,—English, Japanese, and Filipino. The shop price was the same on all, \$3.75 per 40-yard piece, or $9\frac{3}{8}$ cents a yard. This was the asking price, but the native and the Chinese shopkeepers always have a sliding scale of prices, and how far down the scale the price is brought depends on the persistence and skill in arguing of the buyer, so the real retail price was probably somewhere between $8\frac{1}{2}$ and 9 cents a yard. A recent invoice from the Miye Cotton Mill, Japan, of 3-yard drills gives an invoice price of 4.30 yen per 40-yard piece, which is only 5.75 cents a yard. To this was added one per cent commission paid the Japanese commission house, and, as freight and other charges have also to be added, the price landed at Manila was probably about $7\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard.

There are some gray half-linen drills, both gray and dyed in the piece, imported from Manchester. These are 24.6 inches wide, 56 by 44 construction, three-harness, and the invoice price is $95\frac{5}{8}$ cents a yard. Some blue drills, all cotton, imported in January, came in cases (the boxes being 2 feet 11 inches by 2 feet 3 inches by 2 feet 7 inches, tin-lined) of fifty 30-yard pieces, 1,500 yards each. These were 24 inches wide, and invoiced at $95\frac{5}{8}$ cents a yard. Some check drills came in cases of fifty 24-vara pieces, $22\frac{1}{2}$ yards approximately, and were invoiced at 6 cents a yard. These were 30 inches, 56 by 48 ends per inch, and were 5.5 yards to the pound. Most of the three-harness drills imported are khaki drills.

KHAKI DRILLS AND COTTON DUCK.

These are three-harness drills dyed the peculiar brown shade known as "khaki", the genuine original color of which is a secret held by one concern in England, with a branch in the United States. These goods come in 27 and 28-inch widths and 30 and 40-yard lengths. Besides being worn by the troops they are largely used in the Philippines by civilians as suits for rough wear, hunting, or traveling in the provinces.

Of the three main brands imported the "Stockport" is considered the most durable color, and is used for the Philippine constabulary service. This is a 28-inch, 30-yard, 3.1 yards to the pound, 68 by 52 cloth, and is invoiced at present at $10\frac{1}{2}$ cents per yard, less 3 per cent discount. A heavier grade of this brand is a 10-ounces to the yard, 82 by 48 cloth, invoicing at $17\frac{3}{4}$ cents a yard, less $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. This comes in 40-yard lengths, 25 pieces or 1,000 yards to the case. The "Wigan" brand is also largely used. This is a brighter shade and slightly more dressy goods. It is mostly 27-inch, 2.50 yards, 72 by 48 goods, coming in 40-yard lengths and invoicing at 13 cents, less $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent discount. A heavier weight of the same color is 8.40 ounces to the yard, 27 and 28 inches, 92 by 56, and invoiced at $15\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard, less $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Another brand largely used is between these two in color, not being as dull as the Stockport nor as bright as the Wigan brand. It is usually sold 28-inch, 30-yards, 72 by 52, and invoices at $15\frac{3}{8}$ cents a yard, less $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent discount. Practically all of these come from England.

White cotton duck, while not as popular for men's white suits as the white drills, is imported in large quantities. The duck is a heavy-weight, close-woven fabric, of a stiff, hard feel, and has great wearing qualities. It is made of coarse two-ply yarns, and is a plain woven cloth. It is used in general for sails, tents, awnings, outing suits, etc., ranging from 7 ounces to the yard, 27 inches wide, to $25\frac{1}{4}$ ounces to the yard, 60 inches wide. That mostly imported into the Philippines is the white cotton duck, and is the 28-inch, 96 by 72, 30-yard, 7 ounces to the yard quality, and is used for men's white suits. The present price is $13\frac{1}{2}$ cents to 15 cents a yard, f. o. b. Liverpool. For these suits the cloth is made of bleached yarn, and it is heavily starched afterwards. Practically all of this cloth comes from England, but this trade should go to the United States. Of 7-yard gray duck unbleached, imported, the present invoice price on 24-inch, 30-yard, goods is \$2.19 per piece, which is about $7\frac{1}{3}$ cents a yard. This comes 60 pieces, or 1,800 yards, to a case. Most of this white duck is 28 or $28\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide. Some comes in lengths of 30 yards, but most of it is 70 to 80 yards long and 10 pieces to a case. The lengths are very variable; for instance, one case noticed had 10 pieces of 66, $66\frac{3}{4}$, 67, $68\frac{1}{8}$, 76, 77, 78, $78\frac{1}{2}$, 79, and $79\frac{1}{8}$ yards, respectively. It was invoiced at 22.305 kilograms per 100 square meters, which is about $5\frac{1}{3}$ ounces to the yard.

BETILLES.

Betilles is a Swiss muslin of large mesh, and is one of the four main textiles imported into Manila. Immense quantities are brought in. It is not difficult to make, and would be a new line for American manufacturers. At 10 cents a yard for 44 by 32 end goods, even considering the bleached yarns, it should pay. It is evidently paying the Swiss and British, and if carefully figured out it might, even with higher labor, leave a good margin of profit to Americans. These goods are called "betilles" on the invoices received from Zurich, and are so known to the Spaniards, but the Chinese shopkeeper here usually refers to them as "Swiss muslin", or muslin for mestizas. Mestizas usually means half-breed, but is here used as meaning the waists and scarfs made of this kind of goods and worn by the women.

Practically speaking, this betilles is a mosquito netting stiffly starched. The construction is the same both ways, and consists of three threads and then a space, then one thread and then a space, and then three threads again. The three threads running each way form open squares about $\frac{1}{8}$ inch each way, which are split into four smaller open squares by the single threads. This is the construction of the great bulk of these goods. Other constructions have stripes formed by the warp for a space being closer reeded, giving a close and then an open construction. Others have figured work, dots, circles, small birds, etc., formed of colored threads over the main body. The ornamentation of a fabric, where the ground weave is a plain weave and a thick colored end, in forming figures on the surface, is done either by means of lappets, where the figures are inserted by means of extra warp threads that form the figures and then float underneath until the next figure is to be formed, these floats being afterwards cut off, or else by means of swivels, where extra filling is used for forming these patterns, and which is inserted by means of small shuttles about four inches long that are attached to the slay cap and lowered into the warp at intervals by means of a rack and pinion.

These betilles are either plain white, piece dyed, striped, checked, printed, or ornamented as stated. The larger part comes from Switzerland, but recently England has begun shipping large quantities of the printed betilles, and most of this kind are now imported from Liverpool. England is also shipping a good deal of 48 by 48 printed muslin—that is, split goods about $20\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide—and though it looks more like a cheap open-work shirting print than a betille, is, on account of its cheapness, coming into use to a certain extent as a substitute. This is regularly reeded and picked, while the betilles, as heretofore noted, have squares made by three and then one thread each way.

SPLIT GOODS—DYED AND PRINTED MUSLIN.

The regular betilles are all made 104 centimeters (about 41 inches) wide. They were coming in 52 centimeters wide (about $20\frac{1}{2}$ inches), but were split goods, and as split goods now pay 100 per cent surtax their importation in the narrow split widths has stopped. They come now in the full widths, which is really preferred by the natives, as it gives them a better chance to cut their patterns in larger size to suit themselves. The lengths are always 5 varas, which is a $4\frac{1}{2}$ -yard piece. Each piece comes neatly folded and labeled, and is sold in the bazaars and stores only in these short pieces—never by the yard. The usual construction is about 46 warp ends and 32 picks per inch, though of course this varies. The number of pieces to the case also varies from 350 to 550, averaging probably about 450 of the $4\frac{1}{2}$ -yard pieces, say, 2,050 yards to a case. These goods run from 6.75 to 8.5 yards to the pound.

The plain piece-dyed muslin is mostly pink or yellow, also some blue and brown. It now invoices at about 27 to 32 cents per piece, which is about 6 to $6\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard. It retails at about 35 to 40 cents per piece. Striped muslin is made with dyed yarn, at least the stripe effect. The Swiss invoice this as “betilles rayees” at about 34 to 38 cents per piece. If the stripes run both ways, forming check or plaid designs, the Swiss call them “betilles a carreaux”, and the invoice prices now run from 36 to 40 cents per piece. There is also a good deal of the “betilles crodees”, which is the figured muslin, made with lappet or swivel weaving, forming floats on the main body of the weave. This invoices at from 35 to 50 cents per piece, and retails at from 45 to 60 cents per piece.

Of the printed muslin, of which there is still some on the market $20\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide and 9 yards long, all now coming in is 41 inches wide and $4\frac{1}{2}$ yards long, the invoice price from England runs from 25 to 35 cents according to quality, and the retail price runs from about 30 to 45 cents. This is for a $4\frac{1}{2}$ -yard piece, the few 9-yard lengths being double this. These betilles are used by the native women as shirt waists, and are usually worn with an extra V-shaped piece, made of the same material, thrown around the neck like a knotted handkerchief. The fabric is always stiffly starched, and, this making the bodice and the wide sleeves stand out, a woman in full dress takes up quite a considerable space. The wearing of cotton print skirts, with a “surang” overskirt tucked into the belt, and this betilles shirt waist, now forms the distinctive dress of the Filipino women.

As noted elsewhere, the natives weave pina and other cloths that resemble betilles, but are usually of higher quality, made from hemp, pineapple, and other fibers. These open muslins have somewhat the look of mosquito netting, and as they are worn stiffly starched, standing out from the bare shoulders and arms, it serves the same purpose, and was probably originally used for this reason.

MOSQUITO NETTING AND NETS.

In a tropical country like the Philippines mosquito netting is almost a necessity and is largely used. All of this comes from Manchester, and is made from bleached yarns. The favorite mosquito netting is one having a bar effect, five picks, then a space, and then five picks again. This comes in cases of fifty 36-yard pieces to a case. Some comes in 9-yard lengths and 200 pieces to a case. The widths are various, but usually 34 or 42 inches. The price ranges from \$1.34 to \$2.56 per 36-yard piece f. o. b. Manchester, which is $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 cents a yard.

White cotton nets for wearing purposes, made into outer shirts, have small hexagonal spaces and invoice at $3\frac{1}{2}$ cents per yard, less 15 per cent discount. These are made in England and come mostly in 27-inch widths.

COTTON PRINTS.

Cotton prints is the sole textile import in which the United States predominates in the Philippines, with the possible exception of Turkey-red shirtings. One reason of this predominance is that yard for yard American prints are better value to the consumer, honestly made of good cotton, not so heavily sized, faster colors, and as cheap as the English. Some complain of the too glaring designs on some of this, and, in fact, a plain print in bright red, yellow, and sickly green is not elevating, but I have canvased the whole market and know that as a whole the American designs are better than those of any nation competing here. An exception should be noted in the case of the French, who, however, ship here only the finer grades. The main reason given by several native merchants for buying American prints was that the colors were faster.

Another reason of the present predominance of American prints is the favoring tariff. Last year, through some error, the tariff was made to discriminate against American prints, which were unable to get in, but this has been changed and now the sales of American prints are increasing rapidly. For the last six months of 1906 there were more prints brought in here from the United States than in the whole of the previous year. Nearly $150,000 arrived during the month of November alone. Before the tariff change the English and Spanish imported large quantities of what are known as "splits". These were prints woven on the loom, 47 inches wide, and then split down the center into two pieces. This made them cheaper to manufacture. For the purpose of guiding the splitting or tearing down the middle usually two or four warp threads were omitted at this point. A false selvage was usually given the split cloth by the warp threads for a space on either side of the split being doubled up; that is, run two ends to a heddle eye and four to a dent. Under the law recently promulgated (Act of February 26, 1906), "splits" are regarded as cloths improved in condition, and are liable to a 100 per cent surtax. As the regular duty on prints runs from 25 to 35 per cent of the value, this, of course, is prohibitory, and the goods must keep to the full width; and for wide goods to get the lowest duty they must weigh at least 10 kilograms per 100 square meters, so they have had to size heavier to come up to this requirement, and this has deteriorated the quality.

Under the head of cotton prints there is a wide range of goods, from the ordinary printed calico to others, such as printed T-cloths, printed Turkey reds, shirtings, drills, lawns, muslins, cambrics, flannels, crapes, sateens, reps, lenos, etc., and there are many and various finishes. The ordinary shirting print, 24 and 25 inches, comprises the bulk of the prints imported. These are used largely for shirts, and in fact printed calico skirts, sarong overskirt, and a Swiss muslin shirt waist is the regular costume of the Filipino woman.

COLORS AND PATTERNS.

These prints come in various lengths, usually from 30 to 40 yards. Prints in which red predominates are well liked, and such designs as horseshoes, fans, tennis rackets, large dots, vine effects, blocks, stripes, etc., are very common. Of the extracted prints, the solid black with white flowers and scroll design are common. On Turkey reds the main designs seen are horseshoe and anchors and scroll designs. The horseshoe pattern especially is seen everywhere, and Turkey-red prints are worn both by the women for skirts and the men for trousers. Red is a favorite color in the Philippines in any goods. Blues are also popular. Check and plaid designs printed on calico come mostly from England, also prints in imitation of madras. The French prints are mostly delicate shades and largely sateens.

The cheapest prints, 24 inches, 64 by 40 ends per inch, are from Japan, and the finest, 30 inches, 112 by 112 ends per inch, from France. Manchester touches both extremes, shipping 20.6-inch goods, 52 by 40, at $3\frac{1}{4}$ cents a yard, and 30-inch, 100 by 88, sateens at 11 cents a yard. The American prints invoice at 3 to 5 cents a yard.

SHIPPING EXTRAS.

In shipping prints the English charge for the case and for packing, and sometimes the Americans do also, 2,000 to 5,000 yards being shipped in a case. The American cases usually contain about 2,500 yards. In 7-yard prints the net weight is 357 pounds and the gross about 435 pounds. A recent charge on such a case amounted to $7.23, viz: Cooperage and cartage, 50 cents; stamps and petties, 5 cents; freight prepaid, $3.20; marine insurance, $1.56; bank commission, $1.92. On the English 5,000-yard case the charge for making up and packing runs from $12.15 to $17.00, averaging about $13.75. As the importing merchant frequently has to figure very close on these goods he dislikes these varying extras that cannot be calculated, and prefers a delivered price, or at least a f. o. b. ship price free of such charges as cartage, petties, etc.

The Spanish percales that are brought in are mostly 24 inches wide, some $22\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide, and come in 50-piece cases of 50-meter lengths, or 54.7 yards each. The constructions are mostly 60 by 56 and 60 by 52 ends per inch. The weights run from 9 to 10 yards to the pound. The price is given on the invoices of a recent shipment of 24-inch, 60 by 56 percales, as $27\frac{1}{2}$ silver centimes a meter f. o. b. Barcelona. A gold peseta is $19\frac{3}{10}$ cents and the present rate between the gold and silver pesetas of Spain would make this price about $3\frac{3}{8}$ cents a yard. This is f. o. b. Barcelona, Spain. The market price is about 5 cents a yard, ranging from $4\frac{1}{2}$ to $6\frac{1}{2}$ cents.

TURKEY-RED SHIRTINGS AND CAMBRICS.

Red is a favorite color with the Filipino, especially solid reds. They wear these red shirtings as outside shirts, with white trousers. Filipinos have a disinclination to gird themselves in, so they wear these red shirts outside their trousers, sometimes almost down to the knees. Another favorite combination is red trousers and white shirt. These red shirtings are dyed in the piece, come in widths of 28, 29, 30, and 31 inches, and in various lengths. Turkey-red shirtings come from various countries—England, Scotland, and Switzerland especially—but they are beginning to come in large quantities from the United States. Some recent invoices from Switzerland, with the price per yard, were as follows: 28-inch, 80 by 52, $4\frac{1}{2}$ cents; 28-inch, 56 by 44, $4\frac{1}{4}$ cents; $28\frac{3}{4}$ -inch, 56 by 48, $3\frac{1}{3}$ cents. Invoices from Hongkong were: 31-inch, 64 by 60, at 5 cents per yard. Turkey-red cambrics or solid dyed plain scoured cambrics seem to come mostly from England and Scotland. A recent Scotch invoice shows 30-inch, 64 by 60, $22\frac{1}{4}$ -yard lengths, at $5\frac{1}{4}$ cents a yard.

GINGHAMS, CHECKS, AND PLAIDS.

Gingham, one of the most universally known cloths, is a plain woven product having from 50 to 72 ends per inch in the warp, and 20s to 40s cotton yarn in both warp and filling. It is a wash fabric, made in an endless variety of colors in both check and warp patterns. In America it is used mostly for summer outing dresses and for aprons. In the Philippines it is used for women's skirts and some varieties for men's trousers. Nearly all of these goods are stiffly starched after weaving, then run through drying cylinders, tentured, and then passed through hot calender roll, which gives the desired glaze on the face of the cloth. The American ginghams are usually 29 inches wide, but those imported here are in various widths, the greater portion being wide cloths, coming from Spain and England. Those from Spain appear on the invoice as Vichy, but are the same as our gingham. A recent design from Spain, 5 black, 18 red, 5 black, 9 white, 18 red, 9 white ends in a repeat of the weave (the same each way), $52\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide, 76 by 64 ends per inch, came in 35-yard lengths, and was invoiced at $12\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard. One from Amsterdam in a blue, black, and white large check design, 48 inches wide, 72 by 52 ends per inch, invoiced at $10\frac{7}{8}$ cents a yard, less 2 per cent. Another from Spain, 50 inches, 60 by 56 ends per inch, in a more elaborate pattern, using red ground and white, blue, yellow, and black check effects, invoiced at 15 cents a yard. One of the few American ginghams on this market is 29-inch, 60 by 48, 6.8-yard goods, and invoiced at $4\frac{1}{2}$ cents. This is 10 black, 4 white, 2 red, 4 white ends, each way. Another that is very popular is a 29-inch, 60 by 56, 7-yard goods, invoiced at $5\frac{1}{4}$ cents, and constructed 4 green, 2 red, 4 green, 6 white, 4 green, 8 white, 2 black, 8 white, 4 green, 6 white each way.

Of the higher priced fancy gingham from Barcelona a favorite pattern is made with warp 14 ends purple, 2 white, 14 purple, 2 printed black and white, 6 white, 1 printed orange and white, 1 printed green and white, 6 white, 2 printed black and white ends. The filling is 6 purple, 4 white, 6 purple, 12 white, 2 purple, 12 white ends. This makes a pretty dress pattern resembling madras. It is 52 inches wide, 72 by 68, $4\frac{1}{2}$ yards to the pound, packed fifty 36-yard pieces to a case, and invoiced at about $16\frac{3}{4}$ cents a yard.

There is a good deal of cloth invoiced here as "carranclanes" that is practically a narrow gingham. These are mostly 24 inches, though a few invoiced as carranclanes are 50 inches wide and are made in both check and plaid designs. A favorite pattern is a plain check consisting of 18 white and then 18 colored ends each way, the usual colors being red, blue, or yellow. This 24-inch, 60 by 44 ends per inch, invoices from England at $4\frac{1}{4}$ cents a yard, and 60 by 60 at $5\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard. Some of the fancier effects are made with printed yarns and invoice as high as 15 cents a yard for the wide 50-inch. The usual length of these carranclanes is 20 varas, or about 18.5 yards.

Of the coarse cotton plaids a usual width is 40 inches, 52 by 44 ends per inch, and invoice price 7 cents a yard. The widths vary, however, a good many being imported 23 inches wide. Lengths vary also, but the most usual length is 20 varas, or about $18\frac{1}{2}$ yards. The 23-inch, 60 by 48, invoice for 58 cents per piece, or $3\frac{1}{8}$ cents a yard. These plaids come in fairly large quantities from Amsterdam and Manchester, with a few from Vienna, Barcelona, and other places. The fancy checks are mostly from Manchester, 28 inches wide, fifty 24-yard lengths to a case, 48 by 44 ends per inch, about 10 yards to the pound, and invoiced at 7 cents, c. i. f. Manila. A cotton Arabia check that is often seen consists of two red and two white ends each way, but each end is woven separately, giving somewhat of a star check effect. This is $23\frac{3}{4}$ inches wide, 60 by 52 ends per inch, and invoices at 95 cents per piece of 24 yards, or about 4 cents a yard. Oxford checks, 28 inches, 56 by 40 ends per inch, invoice at \$1.09 per 24-yard lengths, or about $4\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard.

Coarse cottons in stripes of various styles are well liked. A blue and white stripe that is perhaps the most common of all is a plain woven goods with 2 blue and 2 white warp ends, solid blue filling, and usually an eighth of an inch red or white selvage. The English invoice this as blue striped cottons, 24 inches, 24 yards, 84 by 52 ends, at $6\frac{1}{8}$ cents per yard. Similar goods from Spain are labeled regrettas, 25 inches, 27 yards, at $4\frac{3}{4}$ cents a yard (a little coarser construction), and the Swiss invoice it as rayadillos, in 48-inch widths, 20 varas ($18\frac{1}{2}$ yards), at about 12 to 14 cents a yard. Various styles and weights of this pattern are used for trousering, dress goods, furniture coverings, etc. Red striped goods are also greatly used for trousers, shirts, women's skirts, etc. A 2 white and 2 red warp end, solid red filling, coarse cotton goods, from India, retails at 5 cents a yard and is 29 inches, 40 by 40 ends per inch. A favorite red striped pattern that is often seen has solid red filling, with the warp arranged 25 red, 4 white, 4 blue, 25 red, 2 yellow, 4 black, 1 white, 2 blue, 4 black, 1 white, 2 blue, 4 black, 1 white, 2 blue, 4 black, 2 yellow ends in a repeat. This comes from Amsterdam, is $40\frac{1}{2}$ -inch, 45-yard, 52 by 48 goods, and invoices at $10\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard.

"Hollandas", stiffly starched, coarse, striped cottons, are made with white filling, and such patterns as 9 white, 2 black, 9 white, 4 black; or 7 white, 1 blue, 1 red, 1 blue, 1 red, 1 blue, 1 red, 1 blue. These are 24 inches wide, and mostly 64 by 44 construction, the present invoice price from England being $4\frac{1}{8}$ cents a yard, f. o. b. Liverpool. A small amount of convict stripes comes from England, but the cotton mill at Manila now makes most of this. The invoice price from England is $5\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard for 28-inch, 52 by 44, 50-yard goods. The stripes are 1-inch filling stripes, the warp being solid black, and the filling alternately 44 white and 44 black picks.

"Sarongs" and "patadeones" are words that the average American manufacturer never heard of, but they are familiar terms in the Philippines. The Filipino women wear skirts of cotton prints, but outside these they throw around them a "sarong", as the Moros call it, or a "patadeone", as the Tagalogs usually call it, which is simply a loose fold of cloth tucked in at the belt and usually with one corner tucked up. The cloth used for this is sometimes a check, but usually a striped pattern, and comes from Spain. These usually come cut up in 6-yard lengths with stitched edges, but are sometimes shipped in the piece and made up afterwards. There are usually 200 sarongs or 1,200 yards to a case.

A sarong pattern that is often seen has a dark-red filling, and warp arranged 4 black, 8 purple, 24 black, 8 purple, 4 black, 2 yellow, 4 black, 4 purple, 4 black, 4 purple, 4 black, 2 yellow ends, or 72 ends in a repeat. This has a two-inch black warp border on each side and a 3 white, 2 red, 3 white selvage woven with double ends. This cloth is $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide, 60 by 40 ends per inch, and weighs 161 kilograms per 1,200 yards, which is about 4.75 yards to the pound. The present invoice price at Barcelona is about 11.75 cents a yard.

"Gris" or gray cloth, is imported mostly from Manchester, and is a favorite cheap dress goods. It is made with solid white warp and blue or black filling. It comes 30 inches wide, 24-yard lengths, 100 pieces to the case, 76 by 68 ends per inch, and invoices at 5 to $6\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard. A finer grade of this, made with solid blue warp and white filling, has finer yarn and is tented and given a glazed finish on the calender rolls. It is invoiced from Manchester as cotton lusters, at $6\frac{3}{4}$ cents a yard.

SAMPLE JAPANESE SHIPMENT.

A recent invoice of cotton crepe from Kobe, 20-yard lengths, shows the number of extras that an importing merchant sometimes finds himself liable for and which cannot be calculated in advance. Some European extras are even more multitudinous, but this from Japan is given simply because it is in concise form.

The invoice was of 10 cases of striped cotton crepe from Kobe. Four cases white crepe, 200 dozen pieces, \$314.00; 2 cases of cotton crepe, 100 dozen pieces, \$159; 4 cases of striped cotton crepe, 200 dozen pieces, \$284; total invoice value, \$757. The charges were as follows: Boxing and coolie hire, \$1.74; biscum income tax, 76 cents; Chinese club fee, 76 cents; clerical fee, \$1.49; consular fee, \$2.51; marine insurance, \$7.40; freight paid at Kobe, \$13.26; commission agent's fee, 1 per cent of the invoice value, \$7.58; revenue stamp, $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents; total, \$35.50 $\frac{1}{2}$.

In addition the duty is always paid by the importer. The above were mostly about $4\frac{1}{2}$ -yard goods, about 68 by 36 ends per inch, and so fall under paragraph 117 B of the Philippine tariff and pay 14 cents per kilogram plus 30 per cent. The surtax of 30 per cent is added on account of the dyed yarn stripes. This comes to \$182 (1.84 cents a yard). Adding, say, \$4.98 for unloading and drayage, etc., at Manila and we have: Original invoice price, \$757; charges, \$35.50 $\frac{1}{2}$; duty, \$182; costs at Manila, \$4.98; total, \$979.48 $\frac{1}{2}$; that is, say, 30 per cent above the original invoice price that the goods cost the importer on his shelves. Allowing 10 per cent for the cost to the merchant of carrying these in stock, interest on his money, store costs, etc., and 15 per cent clear profit, the merchant therefore has to sell the goods at least 55 per cent above the invoice price. The invoice price was \$757 for 10,000 yards, or 7.6 cents per yard; so the selling price in Manila will be, say, 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard. I priced striped crepe of apparently the same quality in the Manila retail stores and found it quoted at 11 $\frac{1}{4}$ to 15 cents a yard, proving the above to be approximately correct.

IMPORT OF COTTON TROUSERINGS.

Large quantities of cotton trouserings are imported into the Philippines, mostly from Zittau, Germany; Zurich, Switzerland; and Manchester, England. These come in various lengths, 24 to 40 yards, but are practically all 48 inches wide. A dark-colored check from Manchester, 64 by 64 ends per inch, is now invoiced at 15 cents a yard. A black-and-white check, a favorite pattern, from Germany, 64 by 56 ends per inch, invoices at 16 cents a yard, less 3 per cent and 2 per cent. A dark plaid effect, also from Germany, 68 by 48 ends per inch, invoices at 18 $\frac{1}{2}$ cents a yard, less 4 per cent. From Switzerland, what we know in America as the common "pin-head" check, 68 by 58 ends per inch, invoices at, say, 14 cents a yard. A finer and smoother pin-head check, 84 by 76, invoices at 15 cents a yard, less 5 per cent.

These are all imported from Europe, though at present prices the United States could well afford to compete. Some of these trouserings are napped on the underside, and some are woven with a quarter-inch green selvage; others, however, are nothing but cheap cottonades, and others, again, classed as trouserings, are very similar to the 4-yard plaids and cassimeres that are made in large quantities by some of our southern mills. The cheaper pin-head check pattern is exactly the same as that which is used in the United States in large quantities for overalls. These goods are 48-inch, but at prevailing prices a good many of them (not all, as some are very cheap) could be made in the United States and shipped here at a good profit, and it would pay American mills to put in wider looms and try some of the wider class of goods that are in demand in the Orient. At present very few American mills make as wide goods as these.

Most of the cotton trousering is plain woven. A few are fancy patterns. Some are plain weave with twill stripes and others are made with warp and weft checks made by the weave instead of with colors. Granite weaves and spot-figured weaves are also used, but the greater portions are plain woven cottons.

COTTON FLANNELS AND FLANNELETS.

Cotton flannels are imported in fairly large quantities for outing flannels, for bed clothing, curtains, etc. The largest proportion is probably from England, with Japan and Spain next. A moderate amount comes from the United States, but it does not, as it easily could and should, monopolize the trade. Cotton flannel is a soft woven fabric, either plain or twill weave, and napped on one side, sometimes on both. The twill weave, having longer floats, gives a better surface to raise a nap; the filling is slack twisted, and the warp very lightly sized. For winter wear the 3 up and 1 down twill is ordinarily used, and for summer wear the 2 up and 1 down twill; this for the reason that the longer floats on the first permit of a longer nap. The cotton flannels mostly imported into the Philippines are light-weight outing flannels. They come in 25-inch widths, plain and striped. A 25-inch, 64 by 48 quality, bleached, is invoiced by Manchester at 5 cents a yard, and a 24.8-inch, 72 by 72 quality, striped, is invoiced at 6 $\frac{7}{8}$ cents a yard. A dressy, twilled, mercerized cotton flannel, striped, 25 inches, 80 by 68, invoices from Manchester at 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ cents a yard.

Flannelet is a soft, narrow, light-weight fabric, with a light nap on both sides. The filling is very soft and fine. Bleached yarns are used, but the flannelets mostly imported here are solid colors, being piece-dyed, delicate shades of sky blue, rose red, salmon, lilac, light green, etc. A small amount is printed. Flannelet is used for wrappers, kimonos, etc., and is a wash fabric. Recent Amsterdam invoices show a price of 6 cents a yard for piece-dyed, 25-inch, 52 by 48 flannelet.

BLANKETS AND TOWELS.

Being a tropical country, heavy woolen blankets are not ordinarily needed in the Philippines. The nights are moderately cool, however, so light blankets are used, and for this the cheap, light-weight cotton blanket is the best, and these are imported in good quantities. They come mostly from England and Spain. These are mostly piece-dyed, but some are striped and some are plaid designs. For the solid dyed the favorite color is red, then gray, khaki, blue, salmon, etc. The lightest varieties are practically flannelets, while the heaviest kinds are only medium weight. Forty-eight by 60 inches is an ordinary size, though longer lengths are used. Forty-eight inches is the regular width. On the piece-dyed, medium-weight cotton blankets the present invoice price from Rotterdam is 25.7 cents. These blankets retail at 50 cents each. The striped blankets are invoiced at present at 32 cents gold, and retail at 50 to 75 cents each. There are scarcely any American cotton blankets on this market, but the trade is growing and worth looking after. Filipinos who formerly were content to sleep on matting now aspire to a couple of blankets for their bed, and the demand is gradually increasing.

On towels the market is divided between England and Japan. A cheap, soft, woven cloth that is imported from Japan is 40 by 32 ends per inch, comes in pieces 13 inches wide and 22 yards long, and invoices at 45 cents per piece, plus all charges, freight, etc. This is retailed in the piece at about $1, and afterwards cut up into towels about a yard long. Some of this is also imported 18 inches wide. Most of this is plain bleached, but some is printed about every yard with a large star or anchor in the center. Some white pique towels, 22 by 48 and 24 by 52, are brought in from England at $2.25 per dozen, but are rather too stiff and not very popular. The regular Turkish towel is imported from both Japan and England. This cloth has two rows of loops, formed by warp of yarn, in regular order on both sides of the fabric. These come in solid bleached towels, having side and cross border color effects, stripe and plaid designs, etc., the favorite colors being pink, red, blue, and green. These invoice at 50 cents to $1.30 a dozen and retail at 15 to 50 cents apiece. The usual size is about 19 by 38 for fringed. The smooth-finish English towels invoice at 25 to 75 cents a dozen and retail at 5 to 15 cents apiece.

COTTON HANDKERCHIEFS.

There is a large market for cheap cotton handkerchiefs, also a smaller market for fine qualities. The market is controlled by England, with smaller quantities coming from Spain, Scotland, and Germany, and a few of the cheapest varieties from Japan. Figures, specially made up by the Philippine customs on request, showed $3,432 worth of cotton handkerchiefs imported in the month of October, 1906, so the total yearly importation is probably over $40,000, and worth looking after. These handkerchiefs come plain, scalloped, figured, printed, twilled, dyed, handworked, etc.

The largest quantity imported is the ordinary bleached cotton handkerchiefs, 17 by 17 inches to 18½ by 18½ inches, and ranging in price from 40 to 70 cents a dozen. Some mercerized kinds, 24 by 24 inches, invoice as high as $1.50 a dozen. Next to the plain white the printed handkerchiefs are most largely imported, coming in sizes 13 by 13, 14 by 14, 15½ by 15½, 15½ by 16, 17 by 17, and 17½ by 17½ inches. Some are printed without borders, simply the edge stitched back for an eighth of an inch, and invoice from 18 to 36 cents a dozen. Others with the regular one-inch border, with white ground and only the border printed, invoice from 30 to 40 cents a dozen, and still others printed all over, usually flowers on the border and block designs inside, invoice from 45 to 60 cents a dozen.

Dyed handkerchiefs are mostly 15½ by 15½, 17 by 17, or 17½ by 17½ inches, and invoice from 40 to 50 cents a dozen. The usual shades are delicate pink, lavenders, or green. Dyed handkerchiefs with twill stripes or with damask woven borders invoice from 40 to 70 cents a dozen and run from 15½ by 15½ to 19 by 20 inches, the larger sizes being frequently used for men's scarfs. Bleached handkerchiefs, ornamented with colored flower work, mostly hand stitched, invoice from $1.25 to $1.75 a dozen, 24 by 24 inches, and are used mostly for men's scarfs.

KNIT COTTON UNDERSHIRTS.

There is a very large field for knit goods in the Philippines, especially for knit undershirts. These are worn by everybody, and vary in construction from very close knit goods to others so open that they look like mosquito nets. At present this trade is almost entirely monopolized by Spain, with small lots from Germany and England. The bulk of this trade is cheap goods. The usual invoice prices run from $1.50 to $4.50 a dozen. There are some invoiced at 75 cents or under a dozen. It is to be doubted if the United States can compete on the low priced goods, but there is a good demand for higher grades and these should be supplied by American mills.

In connection with this matter a couple of merchants related a peculiar incident. The Americans here, as elsewhere, have a firm conviction that foreign goods are shoddy and that the only genuine articles are produced in the United States. In deference to this opinion the foreign merchants at Manila some two years ago ordered large quantities of American socks and undershirts. When these arrived they were found to be in German boxes and with German labels, some with English labels. The Americans always examine the boxes to see if the goods are genuine, and finding German and English labels thereon refused to pay higher prices for them, and the merchants were left with shipments of high-priced goods on hand that they had to sell at a discount. This was related by two merchants and confirmed by a customs official. The manufacturers probably thought that German labels would help the sale of the goods in a market already opened by Germans, but in this case its effect was exactly the opposite. If proper effort be made large quantities of American knit undershirts will find a good market in the Philippines. Undershirts come bleached, unbleached, and striped. To get retail prices that will furnish any idea of the invoice price is difficult, as the retailers, especially the Chinese, have a way of buying a stock of various sizes and various qualities, ascertaining the average value, adding so much for profit, and then selling them all at the same figure, regardless of the fact that some may be 30 or 40 per cent better or poorer than others. The average retail price in Manila for cotton undershirts is 40 to 50 cents apiece.

HOSIERY.

The cotton hosiery market is controlled by the Germans. The cheap colored socks in the Chinese shops retail from as low as 7½ cents a pair up to 25 cents. There is an increasing market for hosiery. Formerly both men and women pattered around in slippers held on by the toes and wore no hosiery, but shoes, and consequently hose are now being worn in increasing quantities. There is also a good market for the higher grades. The following shows present invoice prices and methods of invoice, being from a November shipment from Chemnitz:

Included in the charges are case, $1.67; 199 boxes, at 4½ cents, $8.96, and labor and packing materials, $3.58; making a total of $14.21.

Besides showing present invoice prices, this is a good sample of a German invoice. The figures were in marks, which have been changed to American currency for convenience in following, but otherwise the invoice is as made out by the exporter. It will be noticed that the Germans are particular in giving net and gross weights, size of box, weight of box, of oilcloth, of paper, extra charges, etc., in detail. The customs appraiser and the importer can ascertain every point about such a shipment at a glance. Very rarely is such an invoice received from the United States. Most German and other foreign socks have a seam down the back, while the better American grades do not, and this point is one that, according to a merchant in Manila, will, with the better quality of the American, make them increasingly popular on this market.

YARN AND THREAD.

The yarn and thread imported into the Philippines is increasing,—being $641,164, $779, 910, $907,519, and $1,092,563 for the years 1903, 1904, 1905, and 1906, respectively. The yarn and thread are classed together, so it is impossible to distinguish between them, but the yarn undoubtedly forms the bulk of the trade. Over half of this comes from Great Britain, with Japan next, and then Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, Spain.

India, and China, with smaller quantities from other countries, the United States being about at the bottom of the list. The greater portion of the yarn is shipped in 400-pound bales, containing 40 bundles of 10 pounds each. The finer yarns and fancy yarns are shipped in bales and boxes of various weights. A good deal of this yarn is dyed. Some is mock-twist yarn, made by running two rovings, one or both being colored, into one on the spinning frame; some is printed, usually in imitation of twisted yarn; while other yarn is mercerized or finished in some special manner. A good proportion of it is used for the stripe work in the native hand-loom woven fiber cloths, so it is usually colored or fancy yarn; 60s in December, in 183-pound bales, were selling at 27¾ cents a pound.

There is ordinarily a fair profit, occasionally a very large profit, in the yarn business here. It is a question whether it would be attractive to an American export firm, owing to the great variety of the yarns used, necessitating shipments in each order of a few cases each of several different kinds. As a rule there is no big demand for any one number, being mostly assorted lots. This kind of business has never appealed to American firms, who prefer a wholesale business of selling several hundred-bale lots, but if there is a profit in it such prejudice must and will be overcome.

A New York house kept in close touch with the market requirements by a Manila connection, which would cater to this market, could do a very profitable business here in yarn. The United States cannot hope to control in this line, but on certain yarns, at times, would make a good profit, and if the natives were impressed with the fact that American cotton yarns were superior to the low-grade Indian and Japanese cotton yarns, American spinners could get part of the trade that goes to those countries, even at higher prices.

SAMPLE INVOICE CASE.

A good deal of the cotton goods imported into Manila comes in assorted lots, a few cases of one cloth, a few of another, etc. In a great many instances only a few bolts of each are shipped, and the English and Germans, unlike the Americans, will cheerfully fill any size order down to one case, and then arrange that one case as desired. A one-case invoice that I came across was packed and invoiced as follows:

a In an official communication from the Collector of Customs of the Philippine Islands concerning the undervaluation of tobacco exports, it is stated that "in all the statistics of leaf tobacco exported prior to January, 1905, the values should be increased about fifty per cent."

MATERIAL PROGRESS AND BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

(From Special Report of WM. H. TAFT, Secretary of War.)

The chief products of the islands are abaca, or Manila hemp as it is generally called, the fibre of a fruitless variety of banana plant; cocoanuts, generally in the form of the dried cocoanut meat called "copra;" sugar, exported in a form having the lowest degree of polarization known in commerce, and tobacco exported in the leaf and also in cigars and cigarettes. There are other exports of course, but these form the bulk of the merchantable products of the islands. In addition to these, and in excess of most of them except hemp, is the production of rice which constitutes the staple food of the inhabitants. Some years before the Americans came to the islands the production of rice had diminished in extent because the hemp fibre grew so much in demand that it was found to be more profitable to raise hemp and buy the rice from abroad. In the first few years of the American occupation, however, during the insurrection and the continuance of the guerrilla warfare, and finally the prevalence of ladronism, many of the rice fields lay idle and the importation of rice reached the enormous figure of twelve millions of dollars gold, or about four-tenths of the total imports. With the restoration of better conditions, the production in rice has increased so that the amount of rice now imported is only about $3,500,000 in gold, and the difference between the two importations doubtless measures the increased native production of the cereal.

During the six years of American occupancy under the civil government agriculture has been subject to the violent destruction which is more or less characteristic of all tropical countries. The typhoons have damaged the cocoanut trees, they have at times destroyed or very much affected the hemp production, and drought has injured the rice as well as the cocoanuts. The character of the tobacco leaf has deteriorated much because of a lack of care in its cultivation due to the loose and careless habits of agriculture caused by war and ladronism, and locusts have at times cleared the fields of other crops without leaving anything for the food of the cultivators.

The great disaster to the islands, however, has been the rinderpest, which carried away in two or three years 75 or 80 per cent of all draft cattle in the islands. This was a blow under which the agriculture of the islands has been struggling for now four or five years. Attempts were made, under the generous legislation of Congress appropriating three millions of dollars to remedy the loss if possible, to bring in cattle from other countries, but it was found that the cattle brought in not being acclimated died, most of them before they could be transferred to the farm, and then too they only added to the difficulty of the situation by bringing new diseases into the Philippines. It has been found that nothing can restore former conditions except the natural breeding of the survivors, and in this way it will certainly take five or six years more to restore matters to their normal condition. Meantime, of course, other means are sought and encouraged for transportation and for plowing. The difficulty in the use of horses is that an Indian disease called the "surra," which it has been impossible to cure, has carried off 50 per cent of the horses of the islands. Considering these difficulties, it seems to me wonderful that the exports from the islands have so far exceeded the exports in Spanish times and have been so well maintained that last year there was more exported from the islands than ever before in the history of the Philippines.

The chief export from the Philippines is Manila hemp, it amounting to between 60 and 65 per cent. of the total exports. Its value has increased very rapidly of late and the result has been that much inferior hemp has been exported, because it could be produced more cheaply and in greater quantity. That which has made the hemp expensive and has reduced the export of it—for large quantities of it rot in the field still—is the lack of transportation and the heavy expense of the labor involved in pulling the fibre and freeing it from the pulp of the stem. Several machines have been invented to do this mechanically and it seems likely now that two have been invented which may do the work, although they have not been sufficiently tested to make this certain. Should a light, portable, and durable machine be invented which would accomplish this, it will revolutionize the exportation of hemp and will probably have a tendency to reduce its cost, but greatly to increase its use and to develop the export business of the Philippine Islands most rapidly.

SUGAR AND TOBACCO—REDUCTION OF TARIFF.

There is a good deal of land available for sugar in the Philippines, but there is very little of it as good as that in Cuba, and the amount of capital involved in developing it is so great that I think the possibility of the extension of the sugar production is quite remote. The moment it expands, the price of labor which has already increased 50 to 75 per cent. will have another increase. All that can really be expected is that the sugar industry—and this is also true of the tobacco industry—shall be restored to their former prosperity in the earlier Spanish times when the highest export of sugar reached 265,000 tons to all the world.

The tobacco industry needs a careful cultivation which, under present conditions, it is very difficult to secure. The carelessness with which the plant is grown and the defective character of the leaves is such as to make the manufacture of cigars and tobacco in Manila despair of using the Philippine product without the addition of the wrappers either from Sumatra or the United States.

All that a friend of the Philippines can hope for is that the sugar and tobacco industries shall regain their former reasonably prosperous conditions. The development of the islands must be in another direction. The question of labor and capital both must always seriously hamper the growth of sugar production. Nor would I regard it as a beneficial result for the Philippine Islands to have the fields of those islands turned exclusively to the growth of sugar. The social conditions that this would bring about would not promise well for the political and industrial development of the people, because the cane sugar industry makes a society in which there are wealthy landowners holding very large estates with most valuable and expensive plants and a large population of unskilled labor, with no small farming or middle class tending to build up a conservative, self-respecting community from bottom to top. But, while I have this view in respect to the matter, I am still strongly of the opinion that justice requires that the United States should open her sugar and tobacco markets to the Philippines. I am very confident that such a course would not injure, by way of competition, either the sugar or the tobacco industries of the United States, but that it would merely substitute Philippine sugar and tobacco for a comparatively small part of the sugar and tobacco that now comes in after paying duty. Their free admission into this country would not affect the prices of sugar and tobacco in the United States as long as any substantial amount of those commodities must be imported with the full duty paid in order to supply the markets of the United States.

So confident am I that the development, which the sugar and tobacco interests of the United States fear in the Philippines from an admission of those products free to the United States, will not ensue to the injury of those interests that I would not object to a limitation on the amount of sugar and tobacco in its various forms, manufactured and unmanufactured, which may be admitted to the United States from the Philippines, the limitation being such a reasonable amount as would admittedly not affect the price of either commodity in the United States or lead to a great exploitation of the sugar and tobacco interests in the islands. The free admission of sugar and tobacco up to the amount of the proposed limitation, for the purpose of restoring the former prosperity in these two products to the islands, is very important. There are two or three provinces, notably Occidental Negros and Iloilo, the prosperity of which is bound up in good markets for sugar, and this is true also of some parts of Laguna, Cavite, Bulacan, and Pampanga, where sugar was raised in the old days with success and profit. In respect to tobacco, the need is not so pressing because the territory in which marketable tobacco culture prevails is by no means so great. Still it does affect three provinces, Cagayan, Isabela, and La Union.

RAILROADS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

In my last annual report, I set forth in detail the concessions granted for the construction of railroads in Luzon, Panay, Cebu, and Negros, and showed that within five years we might expect that, instead of a single line of railway 120 miles in length which was all that we found when we occupied the islands, we would have a system with a mileage of 1,000 miles. Work has gone on in full compliance with the terms of the concessions of the two companies.

Only one of these companies took advantage of the provision for the guaranty of bonds, and they have built about 40 miles of road and have earned, under the terms of the concession, the guaranty of $973,000 of bonds, which has already been signed and delivered by the Philippine government. Of course, in this financial panic these companies are likely to have difficulty in securing investors in their securities. The roads as constructed have been well constructed, and are admirably adapted to resist the climatic conditions in the islands. There is no reason in my judgment why these roads when constructed should not pay a reasonable percentage upon the investment. It is of the utmost difficulty to secure the coming of capital to the islands and it would greatly aid us if the dividends earned by these roads were very large. In the Orient two-thirds of the income of railways comes from passenger earnings, and one-third from freight. Of course, the railroads are very essential to the agricultural interests of the country and will directly affect the amount of exports of agricultural products—so we may count on a steady increase in the freight receipts from the moment of their beginning operation. As I say, however, the chief hope for profit in the railways is in the passenger traffic. In the three Visayas in which the railroads are to be constructed, the density of population is about 160 per square mile, whereas the average population per square mile in the United States in 1900 was but 26. The Island of Cebu has a population of 336 per square mile, or a greater density than Japan, France, Germany, or British India. It is, therefore, reasonable to suppose that the passenger earnings on these railroads will be very large. It was anticipated that the labor problem would be a difficult one to solve in the construction of these roads. This has not proved to be true. The Philippine labor has shown itself capable of instruction, and by proper treatment of being made constant in its application. Of course, the prices of labor have largely increased, but the companies constructing the roads have found it wise to increase wages, and thereby secure greater efficiency. Even with increased wages the cost of unit of result is less in the Philippines in the construction of railways than it is in the United States. Of course, the drain on the labor supply of sugar plantations and other places where agricultural labor is employed, is great and the effect upon raising sugar and other products is to increase the cost. But I think the lesson from the construction of the railroads is that Philippine labor can be improved by instruction and can be made effective and reasonably economical by proper treatment. The coming into the islands of the capital to construct railways of course, has had a good effect in the improvement of business conditions, but it is to be noted that in the estimate of importations the railroad material and supplies which are brought in free under the statute are not included in the totals, and therefore are not to be offered as an explanation for the very good showing in respect to the amount of imports to the islands for the last fiscal year.

GENERAL BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

Of course, the depression in certain business branches of agriculture, like sugar, tobacco and rice, due to lack of markets for the first two, and to a lack of draft animals in the production of sugar and rice has had a direct effect upon the business of the islands of a depressing character. Gradually, however, business has grown better. In spite of adverse conditions the importations of rice have decreased from $12,000,000 gold to $3,500,000 gold, and, while the imports as a whole have increased not to their highest previous figure, they have been maintained within four and a half millions of their highest mark, and, as already said, the exports are higher than ever in the history of the islands, the balance of trade in their favor for the last fiscal year being about five millions, exclusive of gold and silver and government and railway free entries.

I found in the islands a disposition on the part of both American and Philippine business men and of the leaders of all parties in the Philippine Assembly to make a united effort to improve business and general conditions.

BUSINESS FUTURE OF PHILIPPINES.

I do not hesitate to prophesy that during the next twenty-five years a development will take place in the agriculture and other business of the Philippine Islands, which will be as remarkable in its benefits to the United States and the Philippine Islands as was the development of Alaska during the last ten or fifteen years. Hope of this is not what has actuated the government in pursuing the policy that it has pursued in the development of the islands, but this is as inevitable a result as if it had been directly sought, and perhaps the absence of selfishness in the development of the islands is a greater assurance of profitable return than if business exploitation by the United States had been the chief and sole motive. The growth in the production of hemp and other fiber products, in cocoanuts, in rubber and many other tropical crops and in peculiar manufactures of the islands may be looked forward to with certainty.

PHILIPPINE FOREIGN COMMERCE IN THE CALENDAR YEAR 1907.

Commercial returns of the Philippines for the calendar year 1907, exclusive of gold and silver and Government Free Entries, show imports to the value of $30,453,810 and an export trade of $33,097,867. The favorable trade balance dating from 1905 is thus continued, with a credit of $2,644,057 in favor of the Islands for the year. Imports exceed by $4,050,042 those of 1906 and indicate a complete recovery from the depression of that period. In fact import activity is the most striking feature of the year's figures,—foreign purchases reaching a greater value—if the abnormal element of rice be excluded—than ever before under American occupation. Increased export values are also recorded, amounting to $454,975 more than those of the previous year, and approximate closely to the maximum established in 1905.

The increased import total for the year is very widely distributed and indicates generally improved commercial conditions. The largest and most noteworthy gains, however, are to be found in the textile and fiber trade, and the relative importance of these imports is shown by the fact that they constitute a third of all foreign purchases in 1907. The leading feature alike in this large branch of the insular trade and in the large increase for the year is found in cotton and manufactures, which show a further expansion of practically two million dollars in a trade that has made uninterrupted annual gains from the depression of 1903, and which in 1907 reaches the unprecedented value of nine million dollars. In the supply of these imports the United Kingdom maintains her prestige of past years, being credited with slightly more than half, while the United States becomes a remote second with a value of $1,016,752 in consequence of largely increased sales of cotton cloths following the tariff amendment of February 26, 1906, and Spain with her strong position in the knit goods market becomes of third rate importance in the cotton trade as a whole. Miscellaneous vegetable fiber imports amount to $559,076 in which is included a gain of over two hundred thousand dollars, while the silk trade increases from $357,061 to $505,961, and wool imports show a value of $181,834 in the generally improved textile and fiber demand of the year.

Practically another third of the Islands' import trade for 1907 is embraced under the general head of foods, drinks, and food-animals. While this ten million dollar total shows some increase over the figures for the previous year, it is by no means so great as that noted in textiles, fibers, and clothing. Rice is the single item of largest value under this group, and the total of $4,166,744 for the year includes an increase of $174,831. This, however, arises from the prevalence of exceptionally high prices during the greater part of the year, and as a matter of fact the quantity imported continues the annual decline dating back to 1903, though the reduction in 1907 is relatively slight. French East Indies is even more exclusively than heretofore the source of supply.

Wheat flour is a related item that shows an increase coincident with the declining imports of rice, and reaches a value of slightly over two million dollars in 1907. This trade was a virtual monopoly of the United States down to 1904, but American flour has rapidly lost ground since and amounts to but $391,151 for the year, while the Australasian product with the advantage of a shorter haul and a lower price has found a steadily increasing market in the Islands from a nominal value of $1,185 in 1903 to $649,704 in 1907.

In a total meat trade of $886,924 Australasia also figures prominently in consequence of a monopoly of the fresh meat supply, and contributes half of the total for the year, while China is credited with about a quarter of a million dollars in cured meats, lard, and other meat products. In the related cattle trade, which figures largely as a fresh meat supply, and amounts to $1,119,638 in 1907, China furnishes ninety per cent, while practically all of the quarter of a million dollar egg trade is of Chinese origin. Dairy products, amounting to $478,585, show a small increase and are made up chiefly of condensed milk from the United Kingdom and the United States, butter from Australasia, and cheese from Netherlands and the United Kingdom.

Imports of vegetables to the value of $561,116 in 1907 are practically the same as in the previous year. The three hundred thousand dollar potato and onion trade is credited to Japan, while canned vegetables to the value of $93,963 come chiefly from Spain and the United States. Total fish imports amount to $370,671 and show a notable increase in consequence of larger purchases of Spanish and American canned goods. The United States is credited with canned salmon to the value of $93,328, while Canada appears as a new factor in this distinctively American field.

Coffee and cocoa, though classed as insular products, are produced in quantities inadequate for local consumption, and are items of import to the value of $343,288 in 1907. These imports show an eighty thousand dollar increase and are chiefly from British East Indies, while a fairly constant tea trade of about forty thousand dollars annually is of conspicuously Chinese origin.

Imports of alcoholic liquors amount to $548,602. Increased trade is to be noted in both wines and distilled spirits, but a further shrinkage of seventy thousand dollars is found in the steadily declining beer imports of several years past, for which local production is the leading cause assigned. The two hundred thousand dollar wine trade of the year is of Spanish origin. Distilled spirits to a somewhat greater value are largely of British and American origin, while the United States furnishes half of the reduced malt liquor total of $114,793.

Among miscellaneous imports constituting the remaining third of the Islands' foreign purchases in 1907 not embraced under the heads of textiles and fibers and of foodstuffs and beverages, the metal trade is easily of the foremost importance. Iron and steel makes up the great bulk of values under this group and amounts to $2,296,294, with an increase of about a quarter of a million dollars over the figures for 1906. Seventy per cent of this trade for the year is credited to the United Kingdom and the United States, with a somewhat larger proportion from the former. Analysis of the figures in detail shows that the preponderance of the British trade lies in the larger and cruder forms of these metals, whereas the three-quarters of a million dollars credited to the United States is found chiefly in schedules of machinery and the more advanced forms of manufacture. Germany, with imports valued at $382,248, is the only other contributor to this trade of much importance and is credited with the largest increase of the year. In the cruder schedules where the United Kingdom figures most prominently Germany contributes only nominal values, but competes in the supply of higher class manufactures. Brass and copper amounting to more than a quarter of a million dollars is the most prominent remaining feature in the metal trade. Two-thirds of this total is about equally divided between the United States and the United Kingdom, while Germany is the most conspicuous minor contributor as in the case of iron and steel.

Imports of mineral oils reached the exceptionally low value of $521,896 in 1906, but this is more than compensated for in the unprecedented total of $931,494 in 1907. In this large increase the United States more than doubles the figures of the previous year and is credited with $690,142. Russian oil, formerly dominating the market, disappears entirely from the trade, and Dutch East Indies with a value of $153,241 shares but slightly in the year's increase, while British East Indies appears as a new factor in the field with a value of $75,225. The coal trade increases from $426,751 to $513,680, of which Australasia contributes $484,221 and Japanese values decline to even smaller proportions than in 1906. North Borneo coal figures to a small extent in the year's total.

Marked activity in the leather trade is a feature of the figures for 1907. Total leather imports amount to $613,561 and are larger by two hundred thousand dollars than in 1906. The greatest gain is found in boots and shoes, but larger values also appear under unmanufactured as well as miscellaneous manufactures. That the boot and shoe trade of the Islands has been largely lost to Spain is further emphasized by the year's returns,—Spanish sales declining slightly in spite of the much increased total. Of total boot and shoe imports valued at $419,749, the United States is credited with $301,181 and contributes about the same proportion of the unmanufactured leather trade.

Under paper and manufactures a total value of $548,904 is found for 1907, and an increased trade of more than a hundred thousand dollars is distributed throughout the various schedules. The United States takes the foremost place as in previous years with credits amounting to $155,604, while France, Spain, Germany, and Austria-Hungary are minor contributors in the order named.

The lumber trade furnishes one of the most notable exceptions to the general import activity of the year,—boards, deals, and planks showing a reduction of more than a hundred and sixty thousand dollars in value.

These imports were abnormally large in 1906, but the total of $209,522 in 1907 is much smaller than that for a number of years past. Increased activity in local production has its bearing on this trade, as also does the new administrative policy of increased use of native woods in public construction. The United States is the heavy loser in these much reduced purchases, and Australasia takes the lead in the lumber trade for the year.

Opium imports show a slight recovery from the very small value of 1906 resulting from increased taxation and restrictive legislation. Of the total of $446,049 for 1907, British East Indies is credited with $390,273 and Persia with almost the whole of the balance. By act of Congress the importation of opium into the Islands is prohibited after March 1, 1908, except by the Government and for medicinal purposes. Further legislation by the Philippine Commission looking toward this ultimate suppression of the opium traffic was enacted in October, 1907, and imports during the months of November and December shrink to less than three thousand dollars in value.

In the larger export total for the year, showing a net increase of $454,975 over the returns of 1906, the most noteworthy and hopeful feature is to be found in the larger marketing of the various minor products of the Islands, such as magney and other subordinate fibers, ilang-ilang and cocoanut oils, fish, shells, etc. In fact the four great insular staples, hemp, sugar, copra, and tobacco, show only a nominal net gain of $13,314, though constituting ninety-five per cent of the total exports for the year. In sugar and tobacco substantially reduced values are to be noted, hemp is credited with a relatively unimportant gain in the face of heavily reduced prices, while phenomenally high prices account for the considerable increase in copra values.

The hemp trade shows a substantial recovery from the reduced quantity exported in 1906 following the disastrous hurricane of September, 1905,—115,395 tons being exported in 1907 as compared with 102,439 tons in 1906. The quantity is, however, still below that of preceding years, while the average price falls considerably below the compensating high figure of 1906. The average price per ton in 1906 was $191 as compared with $171 in 1907, while a very steady decline is to be noted in the monthly figures from $182 in January to $146 in December. The result of these adverse market conditions on the export trade for the year is to show but a nominal increase of $76,861 in spite of a considerably increased quantity, with indications of a somewhat less prosperous state for the great industry than in the previous year. The United States and the United Kingdom are credited with ninety per cent of these exports, of which American purchases are slightly smaller in quantity, but in consequence of higher prices the value of hemp exports to the United States, amounting to $9,316,539, considerably exceeds that finding a British market.

Owing to unprecedented prices, copra ranks second in importance in the Islands' export trade and sugar drops to third place. Copra exports amount to $4,784,151, and upon a slightly reduced quantity an increase of $410,449 in value is to be noted. Export quantities show but slight change during the past three years, but the annual price per pound grows steadily from 2.6 cents to 3.7 cents and suggests the great possibilities of this Philippine product in view of the increasing foreign demand for this vegetable oil base. In the related export item of cocoanut oil a value of $101,765 is recorded for the year as compared with $66,286 for 1906. While cocoanut oil is of general local use and domestic production, manufacture on an export scale is of very recent date, and the growth of this trade in the past two years points to the possibilities of this new export industry as a business investment, as a benefit to the Islands, and as a modifying factor in the copra export trade. Copra finds its chief market in France as in the past, with Spain and Germany as minor purchasers of leading importance, while the United States is credited with a value of $197,558,—the largest during American occupation. The greater part of the oil is taken by the United Kingdom, as was the case in 1906.

Sugar exports are slightly reduced in quantity, and this combined with a lower price accounts for a reduction of $358,421 in the value of 1907. Of the total, amounting to $4,195,671, the China-Hongkong market takes the larger part as in previous years, the United States is credited with $403,851, and the United Kingdom and Japan with smaller sums.

In the tobacco trade exports show a decline of $115,575 and amount to $2,727,429. In the manufactured schedules increases are found, but these are more than offset by a reduction in the abnormally heavy leaf exports of 1906. Spain and Austria-Hungary con-time to be the largest leaf purchasers of the million and a half dollar total, while the million dollar cigar trade though credited to forty-one different countries, is appropriated to more than seventy-five per cent by Hongkong, British East Indies, Australasia, China, and the United Kingdom. The United States is credited with no purchases of leaf tobacco during the year, but with cigars to the value of $24,200.

Exports of maguey fiber show increases both in quantity and price in 1907 and amount to $297,158. American purchases amount to $198,233 and for the first time the United States becomes the leading market for this product. In view of the general interest in its cultivation manifested throughout the archipelago, the active measures taken by the insular bureau of agriculture for the introduction of improved varieties, and the steady improvement in the price of these exports, it seems probable that this type of fiber may become another important fiber asset of the Philippines, and that the Islands may come to share in the prosperity it has already brought to Yucatan through the supply of the heavy demands of the American market.

In the trade of the United States with the Philippines in 1907, imports of American goods show an increase of $589,652 over the reduced values of 1906 and amount to $5,067,538, though they are still more than half a million dollars less than in the banner year 1905. Of the above total more than sixty per cent is found in the cotton and the iron and steel trade, and in the items of mineral oils, wheat flour, and boots and shoes. The most conspicuous gains for the year appear in imports of cotton goods, mineral oils, and boots and shoes; the heaviest loss is in the lumber trade, while agricultural implements and wheat flour suffer to a less extent. Exports to the United States in 1907 are less by about a million and a half dollars than in the previous year, in consequence of larger British participation in the hemp trade. Purchases of Philippine sugar suffer but a slight decline, while maguey and copra find a substantially larger American market.

With this brief survey of the year's trade between the United States and the Philippines the reader is referred for further information to the series of tables appearing in the rear of the SUMMARY, in which the trade of the leading countries having commercial relations with the Islands is given in detail.

FREE-ENTRY RAILWAY SUPPLIES.

Under the act of Congress of February 6, 1905, the privilege of free-entry of construction and equipment materials was conceded in connection with the establishment of a railway system for the Philippines. The granting of franchises by the Philippine Commission to two companies followed; one operating in the island of Luzon as an extension of the existing line known as the Manila Railway Company, and the other operating in the Visayan group under the name of the Philippine Railway Company. Work began toward the end of 1906 and construction has been actively prosecuted by both companies throughout the year, with imports to the value of nearly two and a half million dollars granted free-entry under the terms of their franchises during 1907. Owing to the exceptional character of these imports and the large proportions they are destined to assume for the limited contract period, they have not been included in the strictly commercial returns of the Islands, but in the following table the value of these imports is given for the year, distributed according to the railway company and the country of origin:

GENERAL STATEMENT OF PHILIPPINE COMMERCE FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 1908.

The value of merchandise imported into the islands, exclusive of Government and Railway Free Entries, amounted to $30,918,357 for the fiscal year 1908, an increase of $2,132,502 over that of the previous year, but this seemingly favorable showing is somewhat modified when it is noted that increased imports of the single item of rice more than cover the above total increase for the year. Rice imports, which steadily increased from a value of $3,113,423 in 1900 to $11,548,814 in 1904 and as steadily declined in succeeding years to $3,662,493 in 1907, have in the year just closed in consequence of heavier imports combined with exceptionally high prices reached a value of $5,861,256 or 19 per centum of the total. If these large and increased imports of a staple necessity required to supplement deficient local food production be discounted as having but a purely negative bearing on general import conditions, it appears that the volume of general import activity remained substantially the same in 1908 as in 1907.

The exceptionally heavy cotton trade of 1907 was not maintained, and the total of eight million in 1908 was smaller by about four hundred thousand dollars than in the previous year. Reduced values were reported in all the large items of cloths, knit goods, and yarn and thread, but this was offset to some extent by increases in the cotton schedules of minor importance. The iron and steel trade of 1907 was also abnormally large, and these imports for 1908 were nearly four hundred thousand short of the two and a half million dollar total of the previous year, while a decrease of one hundred and thirty-five thousand is shown in the value of vegetable imports.

The opium trade of the islands which in the comparatively unrestricted conditions of earlier years averaged about three-quarters of a million dollars annually, in 1907 amounted to but a little over half a million under the weight of increased duty and internal revenue taxation. In 1908 imports of the drug were recorded to the value of only $143,670, all of which was admitted during the first half of the fiscal period. By Congressional action it became unlawful after March 1, 1908, to import opium, except by the government and for medicinal purposes and this large item of past years loses its prominence in the import trade.

Among items of increased import value in 1908 was fresh beef which reached a total of $479,557 and practically doubled the abnormally small figures of the previous year. Wheat flour was imported to the value of a million dollars or an increase of about one hundred and fifty thousand over the trade of 1907, adding another year's record to the steadily increasing consumption of this food-stuff. Boot and shoe imports show an increase of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, while a somewhat smaller gain was made in the half-million dollar silk trade of 1908.

Imports from the United States amounted to $5,079,487 in 1908, and were less by $75,872 than in the previous period. In the cotton cloth trade the encouraging figures of 1907 following the tariff legislation of February 26, 1906, were not maintained, and imports of American cloths which increased from a value of $222,951 in 1906 to $1,016,036 in 1907 declined to $533,693 in 1908. Iron and steel imports from the United States suffered a slight shrinkage coincident with the general decline of this trade, but in the rivalry of the United States and the United Kingdom in this field, American products took first place with imports valued at eight hundred thousand dollars. Of the increased imports of wheat flour above referred to the United States furnished almost the whole of the increase, but in spite of this gain Australian flour maintained its foremost place in the trade of the year. American boots and shoes were imported to the value of $338,929 or $117,911 more than the previous year and confirmed the supremacy already established in the insular market. In the illuminating oil trade the position of the United States was also strengthened in 1908 at the expense of the Dutch East Indies, the only other contributor of importance.

Total exports for the year amounted to $32,816,567 and were $896,790 less in value than in 1907. The ruling factor in this result was the steady decline in the price of hemp throughout the year; for though the volume of exported products was generally satisfactory, and in some cases—notably in sugar and copra—contributed heavily to offset the reduced hemp figures, such is the dominating importance of the hemp industry in the islands' export trade that an otherwise generally favorable trade condition was unable to entirely discount the depression in the hemp market.

Hemp exports were 1,108 tons in excess of those of 1907, and amounted to 114,003 tons valued at $17,311,758. The average price of shipments during the first quarter of 1908 was $168 per ton, but this declined to $151 in the second quarter, to $146 in the third, and to $142 in the fourth, with an average price for the year of $152 as compared with $187 in 1907. This loss of $35 per ton resulted in a total loss of nearly four million dollars to the hemp industry in 1908 in spite of the increased quantity marketed as compared with 1907, and one must go back to 1902 to find an average price as low as that which ruled in the past year for this important staple. These exports found a chiefly British and American market as heretofore, but shipments to the United States declined, amounted to 48,043 tons as compared with British purchases of 53,760 tons, and for the first time since the Act of March 8, 1902 established direct shipments to the United States, fell below exports to the United Kingdom.

The sugar trade for the year increased in volume while the diminished world supply reacted favorably upon the price of the Philippine product as compared with the low figure that prevailed during 1907. Exports increased from 118,395 tons in 1907 to 149,323 tons, which taken in conjunction with the higher price, made an increase of a million and three-quarters dollars in the value of the sugar trade of 1908. The total value of these exports was $5,664,666, of which shipments to the United States amounted to $2,036,697, as compared with $234,074 in 1907.

The exceptionally high prices for copra in 1907 were not maintained, but the quantity marketed was so greatly increased that in spite of a material decline in prices copra exports reached a value of $5,461,680, or nearly a million and a half in excess of the returns for 1907. France, as in previous years, was the leading purchaser, while Spain and Germany were in the market to a minor extent. American interest in this product showed a further increase from the small beginnings of 1907, and exports to the United States advanced from a value of $108,086 to $228,565. Coconut oil, a product closely related to the copra industry, was also exported to the increased value of $263,069 as compared with $50,662, and took the foremost place among minor exports of the islands for the year.

In the tobacco trade for the year cigar exports slightly exceeded the record of the previous fiscal period, and amounted to $1,084,196; but the leaf trade fell short by $375,865 of the total of 1907 and amounted to $1,581,623, while the value of cigarette exports declined from $104,268 to $38,345. In view, however, of the exceptional character of both the leaf and cigarette trade of 1907, and discounting it accordingly, it appears that exports of these commodities were considerably above the average of previous years. As in the past Philippine cigars found their chief market in the Orient, while Spain and Austria-Hungary appropriated the bulk of the leaf. Of the million dollar exports of cigars but $21,781 worth found a market in the United States, and no American shipments figured in the leaf trade.

Among minor exports of the islands maguey failed to maintain its steadily increasing values of previous years, while ilang-ilang oil reached the unprecedented value of $181,638.

FREE-ENTRY RAILWAY SUPPLIES.

The privilege of free entry of railway supplies, which was granted by Congress under the Act of February 9, 1905, in connection with proposed railway construction, has been in operation about two years. Owing to the exceptional character of these imports, and the large proportions they were destined to assume for a limited period, it was not thought advisable to sacrifice the comparative value of the normal commercial returns of the islands by inflation with this abnormal element, and railway supplies admitted under this privilege have, therefore, been made the subject of special report.

Railway free-entries, which amounted to $879,759 in 1907, reached a value of $2,777,817 in 1908, and indicate active progress in construction. In 1907 these imports were about equally divided between the Manila system and that of the southern islands, but in the greatly increased total of 1908 the Manila system was much the heavier importer. Only the United States, the United Kingdom, Australasia, and Hongkong figured to any extent in these imports. The Hongkong total was made up to the value of $152,998 in the single item of cement, of which the British port was the almost exclusive source of supply, while imports of ties to the total value of $332,463 were almost entirely furnished by Australasia.

Free-entry railway supplies from the United States amounted to $1,137,830, and were slightly in excess of those from the United Kingdom. As in 1907, the southern system sought its supplies chiefly in the American market, while in the extension of the existing Luzon system,—of original British construction,—purchases were largely from the United Kingdom. In fact, only in the item of rails were imports from the United States by the Manila Railroad Company of any considerable value. American rails were, however, favored by both systems, and constituted a value of $353,451 in the total of $413,730. Of structural iron and steel imports to the total value of $476,652 the somewhat larger portion was destined for the southern lines, and was of American origin; and the same was true in the case of car and carriage imports to the total of $346,519. The eighty-six thousand dollar timber trade was about equally divided between the United States and Australasia, while American explosives were purchased exclusively and to the value of $29,967.

Total imports of free-entry railway supplies during the two past fiscal years, distributed according to railway system and country of origin, were as follows :
